THAT would be sad, for we do not want more war. But the best way to get into war is to show that you are afraid of it. The best way to keep out of it, is to be ready for it, and meet it three-quarters of the way, if it starts coming.

HOWEVER, there is no doubt as to the exact value of professors, as judges of war conditions.

Napoleon Bonaparte knew a good deal about war. When he started on his Egyptian campaign, he took with him solemn professors from the Academy of Science in Paris. Their presence lent a dignified touch to the expedition.

BUT when real fighting came, Napoleon formed a square of men, hollow in the middle, and gave the order, "Scientists and donkeys in the center."

IF THE professors persuaded President Coolidge that there is danger of war, perhaps he will persuade somebody to build some fighting airships that will fly and give American fighting airmen a chance.

YESTERDAY congress approved a scheme to spend $105,000,000 on 10 new cruisers.

Those are nice toys, and would make amusing targets for foreign airmen. The money they cost, honestly spent, would build enough airships to make this nation safe against any possible attack.

14 WITNESSES TESTIFY FOR PROSECUTION IN KENNEY MURDER

State May Rest Case Before Adjournment Tonight.

HINT NIGHT MEET

Defense Expected to Get Its Inning Tomorrow.

Completion of state testimony against Nick Scaccuto, accused of the murder of Patrolman James Kenney, Wellsville, before adjournment at 5 o'clock tonight, was indicated as common pleas court recessed at Lisbon at noon today with 14 out of the prosecution's 22 witnesses having been on the stand.

One Witness Excused.

If the examination of witnesses continues with the rapidity that marked the morning session, the prosecution probably will be able to rest at the close of the afternoon.

Unless Judge David Thomas, of Marietta orders a night session, upon which he has made no announcement, the 15 defense witnesses will begin their testimony tomorrow morning should the state get through today.

Witnesses who testified at the morning session included Fred Herlin, C. & P. railroad detective; Arthur Newton, former acting chief of police; Mayor W. L. Fogo, Thomas Madden, volunteer fireman and at present a special patrolman; Patrolman Edward Pugh; Frank Fusco, Fred Morgan, Mrs. Willa B. McIntyre and Charles Montgomery.

Mrs. David Morgan, state witness, was unable to appear for examination. A physician's certificate was presented to indicate her physical condition did not permit her presence in the court room.

Fred Morgan on Stand.

Under direct examination by Prosecutor Brookes, Fred Morgan, of 1115 Commerce street, employed at the Wellsville railroad shops, testified to remembering the night Kenney was killed. He said he talked with Officers Oyster and Excell at midnight and that he saw an automobile between Commerce and Anderson avenue, bearing plate 249,988, and that he learned later this car was owned by Rocco Carbicella. The witness described the car and said some of the side curtains were up.

He went into his home, he testified, and a little later heard a commotion in front of his house. He said he went out and pulled on the light and saw men standing there. One wore dark clothing and a cap of light hue. This man, he said, was of slender build and slightly stooped.

"You see that man in the courtroom now?" the witness was asked.

"That's him there," the witness replied as Prosecutor Brookes asked the defendant to stand up.

Morgan swore that when he went out to the porch of his home, he saw two men further up the street and two men back of him and that there were five men all together; that an automobile was standing east of these

RUDNER DENIES MELLETT MURDERPLOT

ALLEGED 'MASTER MIND' TELLS JURY HE NEVER SAW M'DERMOTT BEFORE

Looking as if he Had Stepped From Barber Shop Instead of From County Jail, Wealthy Massillon Hardware Dealer Testifies for Defense in Trial in Canton Court.

PURPORTED CO-CONSPIRATOR OFFERS "ALIBI" FOR NIGHT OF SLAYING

Witness Reveals His Whereabouts on Days Defendant Was Said to Have Conferred With Him for Instructions, Denies Telephone Calls and Swears Pat Never Visited His Store.

CANTON, O., Dec. 22.—With the testimony of the defendant, who will take his fate in his own hands and plead his innocence from the witness stand, the defense in the trial of Pat McDermott, charged with the murder of Don R. Mellett, vice crusading editor, expects to close their case late this afternoon. Louis Mazer, indicted with McDermott, and Ben Rudner who testified during the morning, is expected to precede McDermott to the stand.

By DAVID P. SENTNER.

CANTON, O., Dec. 22.—Maintaining he "never saw Pat McDermott before today," Ben Rudner, alleged chief conspirator in the slaying of Don Mellett, vice crusading editor, denied categorically each bit of the state's evidence against him today from the witness stand at the trial of McDermott for the Mellet murder.

Rudner, who is a wealthy Massillon hardware dealer, looked as if he had stepped from a barber shop instead of from the county jail. He admitted with a smile under cross-examination that he had served a term in Atlanta penitentiary for liquor conspiracy and had been convicted of robbery and assault and battery.

"Do you know this man Pat McDermott?"

"I never say him before in my life," the witness answered.

Rudner furnished an "alibi" for the night of the murder, for the days McDermott was said to have visited him for instructions, and for the time the defendant was alleged to have telephoned him and then visited him at his store to be paid off for the killing.

Charge He Hired McDermott.

Despite telephone company records of two long distance calls to his store shown him by the prosecution, the witness denied he had ever received them.

Rudner, indicted with Louis Mazer, indicted "jungle king" and McDermott for the murder, is charged by the state with hiring McDermott to "bump off" Mellett because of the editor's attacks on the bootlegging ring and its corruption of the police department.

"I want to take you to the eighth day of July, Benny," E. L. Mills, defense counsel began.

It was on July 8, 9 and 10 that the state alleges McDermoot and Kscholk visited Massillon where McDermott is alleged to have received his orders from Rudner regarding the Mellett "job."

Corroborates Other Testimony.

Rudner testified in detail regarding his business and social activities during this period, corroborating the testimony of previous Rudner "alibi witnesses."

"On the night of July 8 I was suffering from a felon on my finger," Rudner testified.

"I got up at midnight and drove to Canton to look for a doctor. We didn't find any, motored back to Massillon and went to the hospital. It was after

Mrs. Gladys Walter Houck Case Is Battling Police

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—The police apparently were as far away as ever today from a solution of the disappearance of Mrs. Gladys Walter Houck, formerly of Canton, Ohio, wife of Dr. Knute Houck, an alienist and psychiatrist, who is held under technical arrest at Gallinger hospital.

Dr. Houck, a victim of his own specialty, is described as gradually recovering from a violent mental lapse. In his lucid moments he vehemently denies that he killed his wife or that he knows what became of her. He admits they quarreled on the night of December 14, and that "I beat her," but he contends that Mrs. Houck left their home early Wednesday morning and that was the last he saw of her.

After that, according to the bits the police have been able to get from him, the alienist "went crazy." He was picked up in Hornell, N. Y., violently insane and running the street dressed in his under-clothing.

The authorities believe that Mrs. Houck, either has suffered a nervous breakdown and is in hiding somewhere, or that she has committed suicide. They are more inclined to ac-

ROBBERS RAID BARBER SHOP

Three razors, valued at $10.50, a raincoat, worth $20, and three towels, valued at $1, were stolen from the Peter Troisieme barber shop, 247½ West Sixth street, Monday night, according to a report made today to police.

The robbers forced an entrance to the shop by removing a screen which covered a transom over a rear door. After making a search of the place, they left by the front door which was unlocked from the inside.

Patrolman William Lister investigated the robbery.

DETROIT, Dec. 22.—A scathing attack was made by Circuit Court Judge Guy A. Miller, probably University of Michigan's most famous pitcher of all time, on Commissioner Kenesaw Landis today for his publication of charges against Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker.

"I personally think Judge Landis' act in publishing this story is indefensible and is in line with his whole history of hypocritical sensationalism ever since his $29,- and every other lawyer in the United States knew would not stand up," Judge Miller said in a statement.

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 22.—Tris Speaker, former leader of the Cleveland Indians, declared that he had been made the "goat" in the alleged "thrown" game between Detroit and Cleveland with only the word of one man to substantiate the charges, in a statement issued here today.

Speaker insisted that evidence in Judge Landis' hands should prove that he had no knowledge of the supposed crooked game.

The statement follows:

"I have been made the goat of that game.

"I want the public to know and believe me when I say I am entirely innocent of any wrong-doing in connection with the alleged throwing of that game or placing a bet on the result. I didn't know any bets had been made on the game until last June when the matter was called to my attention by Ban Johnson, president of the league.

Not Mentioned in Letters.

"The testimony on file in the office of Commissioner Landis will vindicate me. I am not mentioned in the letters written to 'Dutch' Leonard by either Ty Cobb or Joe Wood. The reason is plain. I knew nothing of any wagers or of any 'fixing.' The only thing they say they have against me is the word of the man who is behind this entire flare-up, Leonard. I have requested repeatedly that Leonard be brought in to face me but he has positively refused to come in to a meeting.

Paul Timberlake, Bud Wormer, James Ward, William Parsons and Barney Thomas, all of East Liverpool, riding in Timberlake's automobile, started early Monday morning for Canton to "listen in" on the trial of Pat McDermott, charged with the murder of Don R. Mellett, crusading editor, but instead crashed into another motor car and eventually fell into the hands of Deputy Sheriff E. J. Fitzgerald and Deputy Game Warden Lon Boring, of Lisbon.

Timberlake, whose car is alleged to have wrecked a machine driven by John Severn, of Minerva, in a collision near Lynchburg, was fined $25 and costs on a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated, when he faced Justice M. K. Zimerman at Lisbon last night. Parsons was fined $1 and the others $5 each on intoxication charges.

WASHINGTON STEWART'S LETTER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22. — Gov. A. Victor Donahey of Ohio now is definitely a Democratic presidential possibility.

Donahey has declared, again and again, that he isn't a candidate. But if he's drafted—oh, well, of course, and all that sort of stuff. In other words, while nobody doubts the absolute sincerity of his denial that he wants the nomination, neither does anybody doubt for a minute that he has his fingers crossed.

VIC DONAHEY

Not being a candidate, Vic couldn't launch his own boom, but Thomas E. Dye, Ohio Democratic chairman, could come down to Washington and launch it for him, and he did.

UP to last election Atlee Pomerene was Ohio's Democratic favorite son, but his failure to beat Frank B. Willis for the senate snuffed him out.

Now the field's clear for Vic, so far as Ohio's concerned.

What opposition does he face from elsewhere?

Notably Gov. Al Smith of New York, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, Senator Jim Reed of Missouri and—at least theoretically — William G. McAdoo.

VIC'S boosters size up their candidate's rivals thus:

Al Smith—too wet; a Tammanyite; sure to be slaughtered by the K. K. K.

Albert C. Ritchie—of only statewide appeal; too wet, also.

Jim Reed—has antagonized nearly everybody; too vitriolic, about 100 per cent.

William G. McAdoo—too dry; too K. K. K.; his boom's busted, anyway.

NOW hearken to his friends' estimate of Donahey:

A compromise Democratic candidate is indicated for 1928. Vic would be an all-round compromise.

His geography's all right—eastern or western, as you please.

He's a vote getter—just entering on his third term as Democratic governor of a usually strongly Republican state.

No. K. K. K. can find fault with him as an "anti;" no "anti" can find fault with him as a K. K. K.

Though known as a dry, he never has harped on the subject sufficiently to make the wets very sore.

Senator Caraway says the Democratic nominee in 1928 will be a dark horse and Vic can qualify as something brunet, up to date, at any rate.

THIS is a Donahey-ite diagnosis. It's just given for whatever it may be worth. Smith, Ritchie, Reed and McAdoo pluggers say it's all wrong.

Nobody calls Vic brilliant or looks to him for flights of eloquence. It is claimed for him that he's a rugged, substantial type; that he has sound common sense; that he can talk straight from the shoulder, if without any fancy figures of speech; that he's been a good governor and that he was a good state auditor for a long time before that.

They call him "Honest Vic."

"It's odd," observes Congressman Davey, who helped launch the Donahey boom, "how fond the voters are of referring to a politician as 'honest' if he gives them a reasonble excuse. It almost suggests that honest politicians are scarce."

Woman Killed as She Returns From Yule Buying Trip

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 22.—Mrs. Ida S. Bowman, 46, was dead here today, as the result of injuries sustained when she was struck by a motor truck last night, while returning from a Christmas shopping trip. Her identity was established when W. C. Kennedy, by whom she was employed, heard her description broadcast from a local station here, after she had been taken unconscious to a hospital.

"SPANGLES" HUMAN STORY

Circus Film Scores in Showing at American.

One of the most human stories ever brought to the screen.

This is the way you will probably feel about "Spangles," the Universal-Jewel now at the American.

Put the sincere characters imagined by Nellie Revell, the author, into the capable hands of Pat O'Malley and Marian Nixon, with Hobart Bosworth and Gladys Brockwell and others in support, and you're sure to have something worth while. Add to that the spectacular features of a great circus, with not only the acts, the animals, the thrills under the big top, but the fascinating life behind the scenes, and you have a very unusual picture. Of such is "Spangles."

O'Malley is seen in the role of a youth who, escaping from an escapade which places him under suspicion of crime, "joins up" with the circus as a "roughneck" or laborer, and meets the pretty star bareback rider, and pet of the show-folk, which sympathetic role is portrayed by Miss Nixon.

The love affair between the "razorback"—another circus term for laborer—and the equestriene gives opportunities for bringing out many points of circus etiquette and caste, all of which have been fully utilized by Director Frank O'Connor. The side-lights on circus life, as well as the scenes of the freaks at work and at play, which supply the indispensable "comedy relief," will please the children particularly, and have not been allowed to interfere with the orderly and dramatic development of the story.

Conflict is supplied by Hobart Bosworth, as the circus owner, who is also in love with the girl "Spangles," and manages to place a number of obstacles in O'Malley's way. Gladys Brockwell appears in the sympathetic role of the lion-tamer, while a newcomer, Jay Emmett, gives a good portrayal of the third of 'Spangles' suitors.

Electric refrigerators are being introduced into tropical Porto Rico.

"Jiggs" Losteiner Will Spend Yule Day in Darkness

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 22.—While the rest of the world feasts and celebrates Christmas Day next Saturday, George "Jiggs" Losteiner, Cleveland gangster and gunman serving a life sentence at the Ohio state penitentiary, will spend his sixth consecutive Christmas in solitary confinement at the big prison, meditating upon the murder of a Cleveland policeman, for which he is "up for life." This stipulation was part of "Jiggs'" sentence, because his victim died on Christmas day. Losteiner, together with others who participated in the recent prison break, has been in solitary confinement since his recapture and as additional punishment, is not permitted to shave.

Q. Of what are the pads used on football suits made? H. S. B.

A. Belgian sponge rubber is used in the shoulder, kidney and knee pads, and in the head gear. This has been found superior to the piano felt formerly used, and it is also said to be much lighter.

Q. How many licensed broadcasting stations are there? M. N.

A. The Department of Commerce says there are 640.

Q. What is the thickness of the steel armor plates used on the naval battleships? E. H. M.

A. They are from 12 inches to 18 inches thick.

Q. When should evergreens be pruned? H. T

A. Dead wood shoud be removed whenever discovered. Other pruning should be done as new growth is starting. Many evergreens do not start growth from old wood so the pruning should not be severe enough to remove all the growing shoots from any branch.

Q. Which will weigh more, dry sand or wet sand? T. H. R.

A. The weight of dry sand ranges from 90 to 110 pounds per cubic foot. The weight of wet sand ranges from 118 to 129 pounds per cubic foot.

Q. When was the first horse car run in New York city? E. B.

A. It was in 1832, and it was on the Fourth Avenue line, running from Prince street as far as Murray Hill.

Q. In what period was the Ice Age included? C. A.

A. The great ice age occurred at the beginning of the Pleistocene Period. During this ice age there occurred several glacial periods marked by the extension of the ice sheets, separated by several interglacial periods marked by the partial disappearance of the ice.

Q. Which is the most harmful, pipe, cigar, or cigarette? F. J. A.

A. Wherever tobacco smoke strikes, it leaves a deposit of oil of tobacco which contains a small percentage of nicotine, a deadly poison. Smokers of cigarettes inhale the smoke into the lungs, where the oil of tobacco is deposited. In pipe smoking, the oil of tobacco forms a coating on the channel of the pipe, so that, the more the pipe is used, the stronger does the smoke drawn into the mouth become. The oil of tobacco is deposited in the mouth and absorbed into the system. In the smoking of cigars the oil of tobacco is burnt up as the cigar is consumed so that little is absorbed into the system. From the above description, it may be concluded that cigarettes are the most harmful of the three, because the smoke passes over the greatest surface of membrane. On the other hand, it must be added that a cigarette is a shorter smoke than a cigar.

Q. Who designed the White House? R. D. M.

A. The designer of the White House was James Hoban, born in Ireland about 1755. He came to the United States settling in Charleston, South Carolina, and later to Washington when the city was first laid out. He worked for the government for the greater part of his life. He is chiefly known for his work in connection with the White House, which he also rebuilt after the burning in 1814.

Q. Is it dangerous to use milk of a cow that has been suffering from hydrophobia? D F.

A. Cows suffering from this disease usually stop giving milk in the first stages of it; hence there is very little danger of contracting hydrophobia from milk.

"Jiggs" Losteiner Will Spend Yule Day in Darkness

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 22.—While the rest of the world feasts and celebrates Christmas Day next Saturday, George "Jiggs" Losteiner, Cleveland gangster and gunman serving a life sentence at the Ohio state penitentiary, will spend his sixth consecutive Christmas in solitary confinement at the big prison, meditating upon the murder of a Cleveland policeman, for which he is "up for life." This stipulation was part of "Jiggs'" sentence, because his victim died on Christmas day. Losteiner, together with others who participated in the recent prison break, has been in solitary confinement since his recapture and as additional punishment, is not permitted to shave.

Q. Of what are the pads used on football suits made? H. S. B.

A. Belgian sponge rubber is used in the shoulder, kidney and knee pads, and in the head gear. This has been found superior to the piano felt formerly used, and it is also said to be much lighter.

Q. How many licensed broadcasting stations are there? M. N.

A. The Department of Commerce says there are 640.

Q. What is the thickness of the steel armor plates used on the naval battleships? E. H. M.

A. They are from 12 inches to 18 inches thick.

Q. When should evergreens be pruned? H. T

A. Dead wood shoud be removed whenever discovered. Other pruning should be done as new growth is starting. Many evergreens do not start growth from old wood so the pruning should not be severe enough to remove all the growing shoots from any branch.

Q. Which will weigh more, dry sand or wet sand? T. H. R.

A. The weight of dry sand ranges from 90 to 110 pounds per cubic foot. The weight of wet sand ranges from 118 to 129 pounds per cubic foot.

Q. When was the first horse car run in New York city? E. B.

A. It was in 1832, and it was on the Fourth Avenue line, running from Prince street as far as Murray Hill.

Q. In what period was the Ice Age included? C. A.

A. The great ice age occurred at the beginning of the Pleistocene Period. During this ice age there occurred several glacial periods marked by the extension of the ice sheets, separated by several interglacial periods marked by the partial disappearance of the ice.

Q. Which is the most harmful, pipe, cigar, or cigarette? F. J. A.

A. Wherever tobacco smoke strikes, it leaves a deposit of oil of tobacco which contains a small percentage of nicotine, a deadly poison. Smokers of cigarettes inhale the smoke into the lungs, where the oil of tobacco is deposited. In pipe smoking, the oil of tobacco forms a coating on the channel of the pipe, so that, the more the pipe is used, the stronger does the smoke drawn into the mouth become. Another Baseball Scandal

The baseball public, still convalescent after the shock of revelations in connection with the "fixing" of the 1919 world's series between the Chicago White Sox and Cincinnati Reds, which resulted in the exile of several stars of the game, was given another setback today by Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis' charges involving two of the greatest idols of the national pastime.

Tyrus Cobb and Tris Speaker, star outfielders and former managers of the Detroit and Cleveland clubs of the American league, have been named with Hubert ("Dutch") Leonard and "Smoky" Joe Wood, now coach of the Yale baseball team, in the second scandal of the black year of 1919.

According to Judge Landis, who called the former Tiger and Indian stars to Chicago for a hearing on the allegations made by Leonard, who was waived out of the major leagues, the two ex-managers who announced their retirement a few weeks ago, are charged with betting on a "fixed" game between the Detroit and Cleveland teams on Sept. 25, 1919. With second place certain for the Indians, it is alleged it was agreed that Detroit should win in order to cinch third place in the Johnson circuit race. And the Tigers won the game.

Both Speaker and Cobb emphatically deny the charges, which are based on alleged evidence of gambling in a letter written by "Smoky" Joe Wood to Leonard, and later turned over to the baseball commissioner by the former Tiger pitcher.

Significant, indeed, in connection with the charges is the alleged story of a baseball player's revenge, the fulfillment of "Dutch" Leonard's purported promise to repay Cobb for what he terms the action of the former Detroit manager in "railroading" him out of baseball.

And, too, it is regrettable that Judge Landis lacked the authority to compel Leonard, the accuser, who is no longer in organized baseball, to face the accused.

Why, too, was so much time required to bring the charges to light? While, as Judge Landis says, "these men being out of baseball, no decision will be made, unless changed conditions in the future require it," the baseball commissioner is justified in the attitude that the good of the game demanded pitiless publicity. But the charges have blotted the escutcheon of four of baseball's one-time famous players.

Speeding Freight

The new president of the Erie Railroad, J. P. Bernet, exemplifies a new principle in railroading, whose value has been proved in his operation of the Nickel Plate.

When Bernet—who had been blacksmith, telegrapher and train dispatcher—was put in charge of the Nickel Plate, he concentrated on two things—getting freight business and speeding freight movements. The two went well together, for the more he speeded the freight, the more freight he got.

Railroads had long averaged about 15 miles a day for freight cars. They were just beginning to move a little faster. Bernet led the speeders. When American railroads in general succeeded in moving their freight an average of 22.4 miles a day, Bernet was moving his 47 miles a day.

Railroad men had held previously that the important thing in efficient transportation was to load locomotives with the maximum quantity of cars and freight. Bernet insisted that this was wise only in sparsely settled areas, and that in highly industrialized sections, the great desideratum was speed. He seems to have proved that.

Speed is today the cardinal principle of American industry. Volume of production is important, but it is speeding machinery and men that makes volume.

The successful speeders, however, are not jumping up and down and running around in circles. Bernet remains calm. Ford remains calm. Judge Gary remains calm. The successful captain of industry—or of anything else, for that matter, generally hurries what he is doing but doesn't let himself be hurried.

A Bank's Parking Service

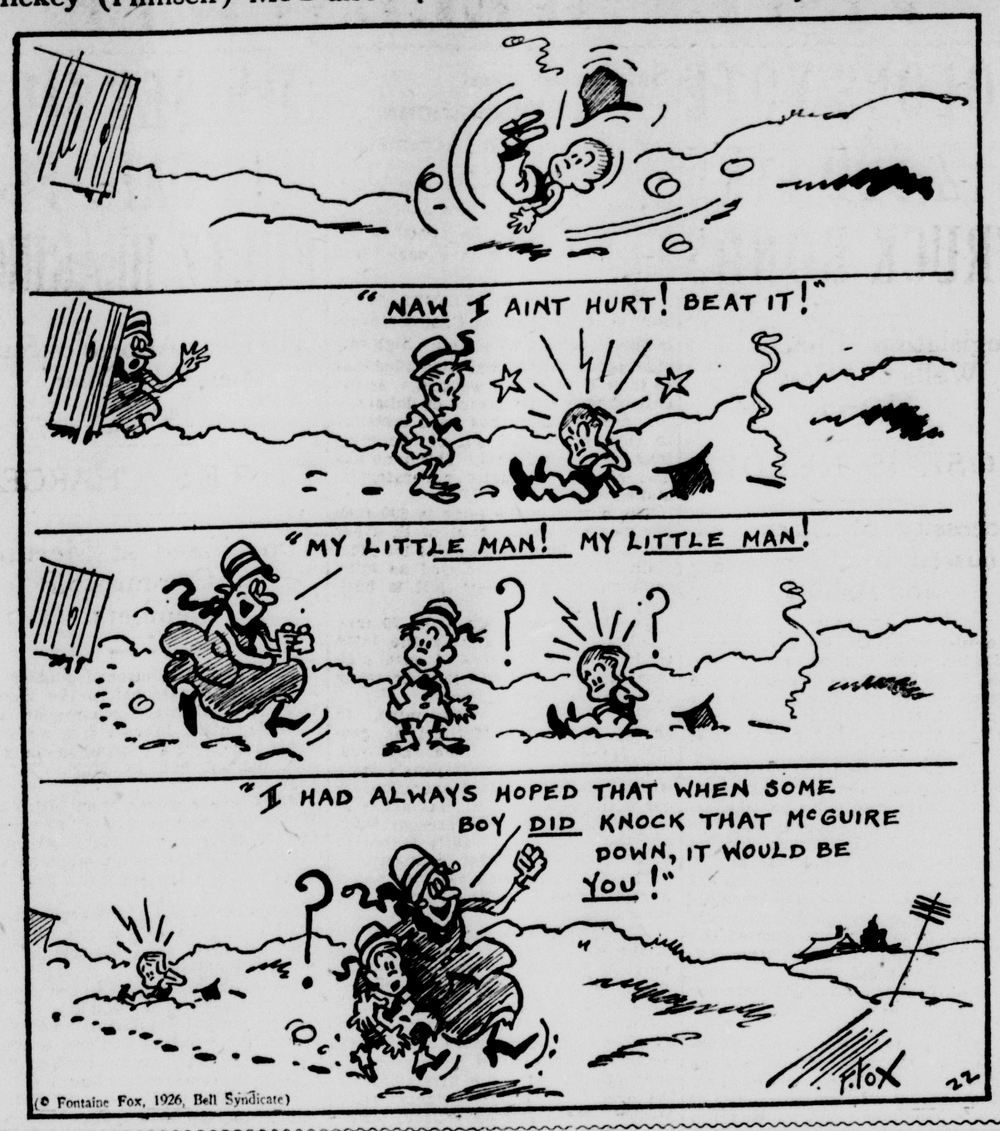

The First National Bank of Detroit leads the nation's banking institutions in providing garage space for patrons. Department stores all over the country have been doing this for a year or so, seeking a solution to the parking problem in business centers.

The Detroit bank is soon to build an 18-story annex for the use of its patrons and office tenants. Several floors will have office rooms, but others will provide garage space for 700 cars at one time. There will be special rates for tenants of the bank's office building. Patrons of the bank itself will have free storage privilege for a reasonable length of time. The two buildings will be connected by a bridge.

Perhaps cities that are young now, with their greatest growth ahead of them, will figure out ideal parking arrangements and ways of avoiding traffic congestion in their business centers. Older cities, that grew up and built up before the automobile's day, apparently must go in for skyscraper parking.

The Chinese can't understand why anybody should walk anywhere if there is any way to ride. Americans are coming to feel the same way about it.

A REDUCTION FOR CASH.

Any Scot will tell you that, while as a race the Scotch are thrifty, it is in Aberdeen that thrift is an exact science.

And it was in Aberdeen, so the story runs, that an especially frugal citizen entered an apothecary's shop or, as we would say in America, a drug store. He told the proprietor that he wished to purchase thripence worth of morphine.

The chemist pondered over a request so unusual. Customarily he sold the drug only on a physician's prescription; but this customer was known to him as reputable and responsible. Nevertheless, he must make sure the purpose was proper.

"Thripence worth of morphine, eh?" he said. "What would ye be wantin' in for?"

The native thought a moment.

"Tuppence," he said.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Park Row has many news "tipsters." They are pariahs of the editorial rooms, the invisible links connecting the underworld with the uppeer. Despised yet endured, they have often revived a whale of a yarn when all trails had grown cold.

Some of the most famous crime mysteries have been solved as result of their tips. The round up of the Rosenthal murderers in the Becker case was really due to cryptic messages to newspapers from professional tipsters.

The "tipster" is usually a "stool pigeon" for the police. To an extent he receives certain protection from his own petty crimes for the larger service of "squaking" on his intimates of the underworld.

Their lives are haunted by spectre of disaster for in their strata the wages of "squealing" is death. There are records of certain squealers being found murdered with their tongues cut out as a terrible warning.

The rewards of the "tipster" are slight considering the danger he invites. Yet accustomed to petty thieving he is quite satisfied with petty graft. Sometimes a twenty or fifty dollar bill is sufficient to unloose his tongue.

The "stool pigeon" must work. He isn't of the intelligence to fraternize on a social basis with the shrewd crook. And if he shows indication of being able to live without work he falls immediately under suspicion.

As a result he is usually an add-job man or engaged in other menial duties around the hangout of criminals and by spying he is often able to salvage bits of information that will send men to prison and sometimes the electric chair.

Speaking of the underworld, there is a phase of night life chaperonage these days that is to say the least different. Many beautiful women are being squired to public places by Longacre dice gamblers, boot leggers and other gorillas up from the East Side to wear open faced clothes and silk skimmers. These potential yeggs are heavy spenders and after a good day at the gaming table or rum running a diamond bracelet means absolutely nothing in their lives. Beautiful ladies, sometimes known to the stage and screen are not at all hesitant about occupying ring-side tables with these rather incongruous figures with blue black jowls, glittering pig eyes and stubbly pompadour hair. What they lack in social niceties, they apparently make up for in hefty bankrolls that are easily tapped. The supper clubs hail them as the biggest spenders. And ladies at least feel entirely secure from jazzing collegiates who "cut in" on dances.

The White Way's most consistent night owl is Nils T. Grunland, known far and wide to radio fans as the announcer N. T. G. He is Boswell to Marcus Loew and arrives at Loew's office at 2 in the afternoon. An indefatigable worker he is usually free by eight in the evening. From then on until dawn he spends his time among several supper clubs in which he has a proprietory interest and for which he stages cabaret revues. He drives to his farm in Jersey at 7 in the morning and attends his cows and chickens. Grunland has been able to maintain this pace for years for the simple reason he has never tasted liquor.

In a yellowed program of the old Bowery theatre for 1878 I find the following artists listed: "Harry Clarke, Songs and Funny Sayings; Prof. Bensley and his feats on the Magic Barrell; Lottie Elliott, Double Face Dance and Allie Lamont in serio comic songs with slides."

HASKIN'S LETTER
By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Reducing Number of Middies.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 22.—The annual report of the Secretary of the Navy, recently issued, voices a protest against the clause in the naval appropriation bill which reduces the quota of midshipmen for Senators and Representatives from five to three each.

This clause reads, "That no part of this appropriation shall be available for the pay of any midshipmen whose admission subsequent to January 13, 1923, would result in exceeding at any time an allowance of three midshipmen for each Senator, Representative, and Delegate in Congress; of one midshipman for Porto Rico, a native of the island, appointed on nomination of the governor, and of three midshipmen from Porto Rico, appointed on nomination of the resident commissioner; and of two midshipmen for the District of Columbia."

In this way the quota of midshipmen for senators and representatives is reduced by a limitation on appropriation although the actual law authorizing five to each remains unchanged. Under this limitation the authorized quota of appointments at the Naval Academy for 1927 would be 2205, which includes the 40 additional midshipmen at large provided for under the law of June 8, 1926. Naval authorities explain that although this number is authorized it is impossible to have this number there at any one time on account for the failures, mental and physical, of midshipmen at the academy and candidates. This is also due in part to lack of filling the quota authorized from the enlisted personnel, naval reserve, and at large which can not be carried over from year to year.

It is also explained that the sudden reduction in the quota of midshipmen for senators and representatives has caused the entrance classes to be much smaller than the quota would indicate. This is because it is necessary for three midshipmen either to graduate or resign from certain districts before a vacancy occures. A senator or representative can not appoint three midshipmen each year from his district—he can have only three at the academy at a time. The class entering in 1926 had 576 members on October 1, while the size of the entering class of 1927 will probably be something over 700. It is estimated, however, that the class for 1928 will drop to 370.

Now an Officer Shortage.

The last five-appointment class will be graduated in 1927, and the approximate number of new line officers thus created will be 540. After that, on a basis of three appointments for each senator and representative, the graduating class will be only about 300 each year.

There is now an officer shortage, the authorized number of line officers being 5499 and the number at the present time in actual service being 5160. The Navy Department is of the opinion that the authorized number is the minimum figure necessary for meeting peace-time requirements and establishing a trained nucleus for war. It is believed to be very important that in time of war there be available for call men who have been thoroughly trained in naval procedure.

The full capacity of the Naval Academy at Annapolis is 2500. Many, therefore, feel that under the three-appointment quota there is an unnecessary waste of facilities. Many boys who go through the Navy Academy could not otherwise obtain a college education because they are not in a position to pay the necessary expense. The academy being a national institution, it would appear to be a benefit to the entire nation to have it operated to capacity as nearly as possible.

If there should be an excess of officers graduated over the number required for active service, these might be honorably discharged upon graduation to enter civil life and civil pursuits. The education thus obtained would equip them for better paid positions than they would otherwise be likely to qualify for. In addition, as said above, they would form a trained nucleus in the event of an emergency.

Each year a certain number of Naval Academy graduates are given staff-corps assignments. Usually there are 25 assigned to the Marine Corps, eight to the Supply Corps, eight to the Construction Corps and four to the Civil Engineer Corps. The future Naval Construction Corps and Civil Engineers are sent to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for a post graduate course of two years, while the embryo Marines are sent to Quantico, Virginia, for training.

The report of the secretary states flatly that "this large demand, with other service requirements upon the output of the Naval Academy, could only be met in full when the Naval Academy was on a five-appointment basis, and can not be met in the future unless the number of appointments is increased above three."

Will Reduce Line Strength.

The three-appointment basis will stabilize the line below its authorized strength at a number about 5000 instead of 5499, as authorized by law. The policy of the department is that

Landis' charges involving two of the greatest idols of the national pastime.

Tyrus Cobb and Tris Speaker, star outfielders and former managers of the Detroit and Cleveland clubs of the American league, have been named with Hubert ("Dutch") Leonard and "Smoky" Joe Wood, now coach of the Yale baseball team, in the second scandal of the black year of 1919.

According to Judge Landis, who called the former Tiger and Indian stars to Chicago for a hearing on the allegations made by Leonard, who was waived out of the major leagues, the two ex-managers who announced their retirement a few weeks ago, are charged with betting on a "fixed" game between the Detroit and Cleveland teams on Sept. 25, 1919. With second place certain for the Indians, it is alleged it was agreed that Detroit should win in order to cinch third place in the Johnson circuit race. And the Tigers won the game.

Both Speaker and Cobb emphatically deny the charges, which are based on alleged evidence of gambling in a letter written by "Smoky" Joe Wood to Leonard, and later turned over to the baseball commissioner by the former Tiger pitcher.

Significant, indeed, in connection with the charges is the alleged story of a baseball player's revenge, the fulfillment of "Dutch" Leonard's purported promise to repay Cobb for what he terms the action of the former Detroit manager in "railroading" him out of baseball.

And, too, it is regrettable that Judge Landis lacked the authority to compel Leonard, the accuser, who is no longer in organized baseball, to face the accused.

Why, too, was so much time required to bring the charges to light? While, as Judge Landis says, "these men being out of baseball, no decision will be made, unless changed conditions in the future require it," the baseball commissioner is justified in the attitude that the good of the game demanded pitiless publicity. But the charges have blotted the escutcheon of four of baseball's one-time famous players.

Speeding Freight

The new president of the Erie Railroad, J. P. Bernet, exemplifies a new principle in railroading, whose value has been proved in his operation of the Nickel Plate.

When Bernet—who had been blacksmith, telegrapher and train dispatcher—was put in charge of the Nickel Plate, he concentrated on two things—getting freight business and speeding freight movements. The two went well together, for the more he speeded the freight, the more freight he got.

Railroads had long averaged about 15 miles a day for freight cars. They were just beginning to move a little faster. Bernet led the speeders. When American railroads in general succeeded in moving their freight an average of 22.4 miles a day, Bernet was moving his 47 miles a day.

Railroad men had held previously that the important thing in efficient transportation was to load locomotives with the maximum quantity of cars and freight. Bernet insisted that this was wise only in sparsely settled areas, and that in highly industrialized sections, the great desideratum was speed. He seems to have proved that.

Speed is today the cardinal principle of American industry. Volume of production is important, but it is speeding machinery and men that makes volume.

The successful speeders, however, are not jumping up and down and running around in circles. Bernet remains calm. Ford remains calm. Judge Gary remains calm. The successful captain of industry—or of anything else, for that matter, generally hurries what he is doing but doesn't let himself be hurried.

A Bank's Parking Service

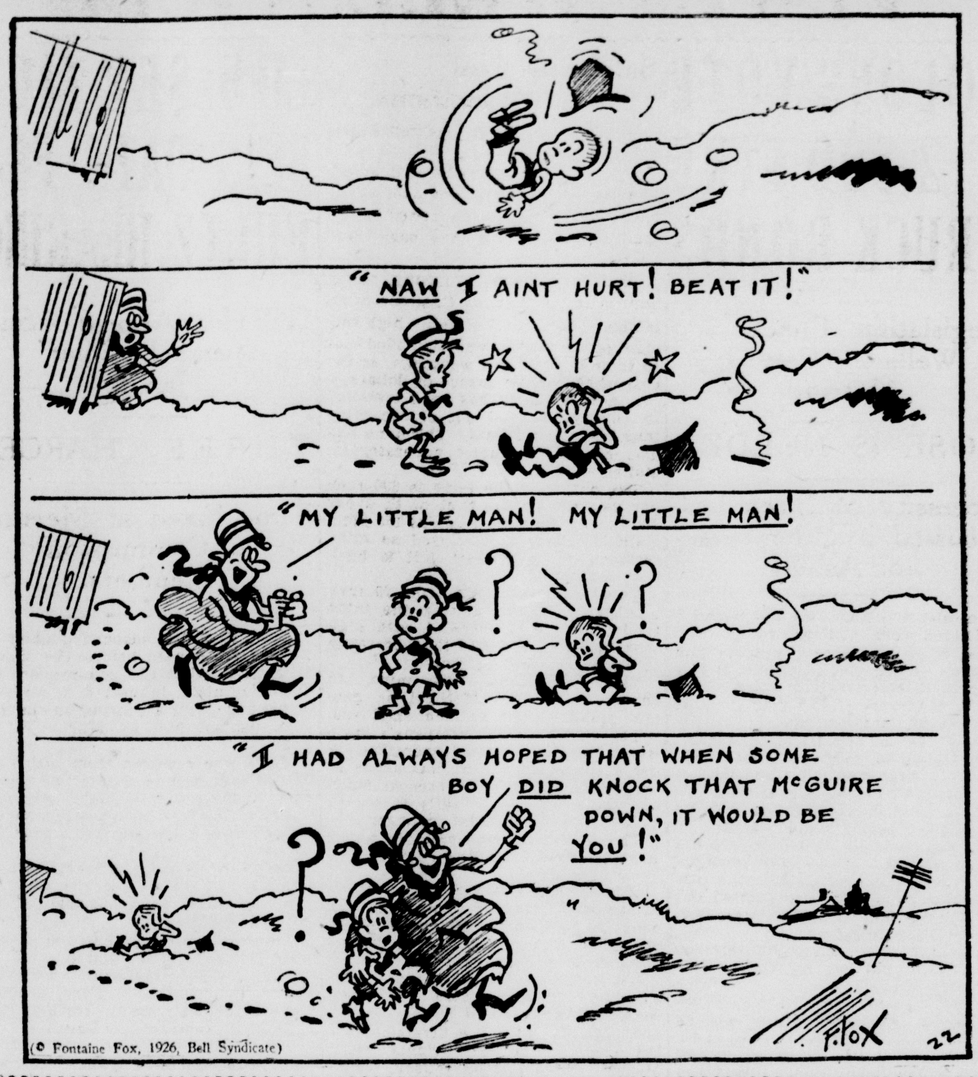

The First National Bank of Detroit leads the nation's banking institutions in providing garage space for patrons. Department stores all over the country have been doing this for a year or so, seeking a solution to the parking problem in business centers.

The Detroit bank is soon to build an 18-story annex for the use of its patrons and office tenants. Several floors will have office rooms, but others will provide garage space for 700 cars at one time. There will be special rates for tenants of the bank's office building. Patrons of the bank itself will have free storage privilege for a reasonable length of time. The two buildings will be connected by a bridge.

Perhaps cities that are young now, with their greatest growth ahead of them, will figure out ideal parking arrangements and ways of avoiding traffic congestion in their business centers. Older cities, that grew up and built up before the automobile's day, apparently must go in for skyscraper parking.

The Chinese can't understand why anybody should walk anywhere if there is any way to ride. Americans are coming to feel the same way about it.

A REDUCTION FOR CASH.

Any Scot will tell you that, while as a race the Scotch are thrifty, it is in Aberdeen that thrift is an exact science.

And it was in Aberdeen, so the story runs, that an especially frugal citizen entered an apothecary's shop or, as we would say in America, a drug store. He told the proprietor that he wished to purchase thripence worth of morphine.

The chemist pondered over a request so unusual. Customarily he sold the drug only on a physician's prescription; but this customer was known to him as reputable and responsible. Nevertheless, he must make sure the purpose was proper.

"Thripence worth of morphine, eh?" he said. "What would ye be wantin' in for?"

The native thought a moment.

"Tuppence," he said.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Park Row has many news "tipsters." They are pariahs of the editorial rooms, the invisible links connecting the underworld with the uppeer. Despised yet endured, they have often revived a whale of a yarn when all trails had grown cold.

Some of the most famous crime mysteries have been solved as result of their tips. The round up of the Rosenthal murderers in the Becker case was really due to cryptic messages to newspapers from professional tipsters.

The "tipster" is usually a "stool pigeon" for the police. To an extent he receives certain protection from his own petty crimes for the larger service of "squaking" on his intimates of the underworld.

Their lives are haunted by spectre of disaster for in their strata the wages of "squealing" is death. There are records of certain squealers being found murdered with their tongues cut out as a terrible warning.

The rewards of the "tipster" are slight considering the danger he invites. Yet accustomed to petty thieving he is quite satisfied with petty graft. Sometimes a twenty or fifty dollar bill is sufficient to unloose his tongue.

The "stool pigeon" must work. He isn't of the intelligence to fraternize on a social basis with the shrewd crook. And if he shows indication of being able to live without work he falls immediately under suspicion.

As a result he is usually an add-job man or engaged in other menial duties around the hangout of criminals and by spying he is often able to salvage bits of information that will send men to prison and sometimes the electric chair.

Speaking of the underworld, there is a phase of night life chaperonage these days that is to say the least different. Many beautiful women are being squired to public places by Longacre dice gamblers, boot leggers and other gorillas up from the East Side to wear open faced clothes and silk skimmers. These potential yeggs are heavy spenders and after a good day at the gaming table or rum running a diamond bracelet means absolutely nothing in their lives. Beautiful ladies, sometimes known to the stage and screen are not at all hesitant about occupying ring-side tables with these rather incongruous figures with blue black jowls, glittering pig eyes and stubbly pompadour hair. What they lack in social niceties, they apparently make up for in hefty bankrolls that are easily tapped. The supper clubs hail them as the biggest spenders. And ladies at least feel entirely secure from jazzing collegiates who "cut in" on dances.

The White Way's most consistent night owl is Nils T. Gruniand, known far and wide to radio fans as the announcer N. T. G. He is Boswell to Marcus Loew and arrives at Loew's office at 2 in the afternoon. An indefatigable worker he is usually free by eight in the evening. From then on until dawn he spends his time among several supper clubs in which he has a proprietory interest and for which he stages cabaret revues. He drives to his farm in Jersey at 7 in the morning and attends his cows and chickens. Grunland has been able to maintain this pace for years for the simple reason he has never tasted liquor.

In a yellowed program of the old Bowery theatre for 1878 I find the following artists listed: "Harry Clarke, Songs and Funny Sayings; Prof. Bensley and his feats on the Magic Barrell; Lottie Elliott, Double Face Dance and Allie Lamont in serio comic songs with slides."

HASKIN'S LETTER
By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Reducing Number of Middies.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 22.—The annual report of the Secretary of the Navy, recently issued, voices a protest against the clause in the naval appropriation bill which reduces the quota of midshipmen for Senators and Representatives from five to three each.

This clause reads, "That no part of this appropriation shall be available for the pay of any midshipmen whose admission subsequent to January 13, 1925, would result in exceeding at any time an allowance of three midshipmen for each Senator, Representative, and Delegate in Congress; of one midshipman for Porto Rico, a native of the island, appointed on nomination of the governor, and of three midshipmen from Porto Rico, appointed on nomination of the resident commissioner; and of two midshipmen for the District of Columbia."

In this way the quota of midshipmen for senators and representatives is reduced by a limitation on appropriation although the actual law authorizing five to each remains unchanged. Under this limitation the authorized quota of appointments at the Naval Academy for 1927 would be 2205, which includes the 40 additional midshipmen at large provided for under the law of June 8, 1926. Naval authorities explain that although this number is authorized it is impossible to have this number there at any one time on account for the failures, mental and physical, of midshipmen at the academy and candidates. This is also due in part to lack of filling the quota authorized from the enlisted personnel, naval reserve, and at large which can not be carried over from year to year.

It is also explained that the sudden reduction in the quota of midshipmen for senators and representatives has caused the entrance classes to be much smaller than the quota would indicate. This is because it is necessary for three midshipmen either to graduate or resign from certain districts before a vacancy occures. A senator or representative can not appoint three midshipmen each year from his district—he can have only three at the academy at a time. The class entering in 1926 had 576 members on October 1, while the size of the entering class of 1927 will probably be something over 700. It is estimated, however, that the class for 1928 will drop to 370.

Now an Officer Shortage.

The last five-appointment class will be graduated in 1927, and the approximate number of new line officers thus created will be 540. After that, on a basis of three appointments for each senator and representative, the graduating class will be only about 300 each year.

There is now an officer shortage, the authorized number of line officers being 5499 and the number at the present time in actual service being 5160. The Navy Department is of the opinion that the authorized number is the minimum figure necessary for meeting peace-time requirements and establishing a trained nucleus for war. It is believed to be very important that in time of war there be available for call men who have been thoroughly trained in naval procedure.

The full capacity of the Naval Academy at Annapolis is 2500. Many, therefore, feel that under the three-appointment quota there is an unnecessary waste of facilities. Many boys who go through the Navy Academy could not otherwise obtain a college education because they are not in a position to pay the necessary expense. The academy being a national institution, it would appear to be a benefit to the entire nation to have it operated to capacity as nearly as possible.

If there should be an excess of officers graduated over the number required for active service, these might be honorably discharged upon graduation to enter civil life and civil pursuits. The education thus obtained would equip them for better paid positions than they would otherwise be likely to qualify for. In addition, as said above, they would form a trained nucleus in the event of an emergency.

Each year a certain number of Naval Academy graduates are given staff-corps assignments. Usually there are 25 assigned to the Marine Corps, eight to the Supply Corps, eight to the Construction Corps and four to the Civil Engineer Corps. The future Naval Construction Corps and Civil Engineers are sent to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for a post graduate course of two years, while the embryo Marines are sent to Quantico, Virginia, for training.

The report of the secretary states flatly that "this large demand, with other service requirements upon the output of the Naval Academy, could only be met in full when the Naval Academy was on a five-appointment basis, and can not be met in the future unless the number of appointments is increased above three."

Will Reduce Line Strength.

The three-appointment basis will stabilize the line below its authorized strength at a number about 5000 instead of 5499, as authorized by law. The policy of the department is that

SCACCUTO JURY VISITS WELLSVILLE MURDER SCENE

JUDGE, LAWYERS AND DEFENDANT ARE IN PARTY

Rocco Carbicella Store and Frank Maggio Home Inspected.

MAP IN COURT

Four State Witnesses Testify Tuesday Afternoon.

In the custody of Sheriff George Wright and accompanying the jury that will determine his fate, Nick Scaccuto yesterday afternoon gazed into the yard of the Frank Maggio home, Commerce street, where police last May picked up the bullet-riddled body of Patrolman James Kenney, 28, for whose murder Scaccuto is on trial in common pleas court at Lisbon.

Scaccuto rode with Sheriff Wright and Deputies Lawrence Kindsvatter and Edward J. Fitzgerald. State and defense counsel were also members of the party.

The jury left Lisbon at 2:15 o'clock, accompanied by counsel for the state and defendant. Judge David H. Thomas, of Marietta, who will hear the case, also was a member of the party, announcing a desire to acquaint himself with the locations that may be referred to during the course of the trial.

Dr. J. M. VanFossan, of East Palestine, county coroner, took the stand as the first witness for the prosecution as the court reconvened following the Wellsville trip. He was placed under direct examination by Prosecuting Attorney Robert M. Brookes. Three other witnesses were called before court adjourned at 4:55 o'clock, including Mrs. Nancy Kenney, widow of the slain patrolman; Zanny Cronin, of Wellsville, and Richard Burns, of Jefferson county, a former Wellsville resident.

Defense attorneys are George T. Farrell and W. B. Moore, of Lisbon, and James E. O'Grady, of Wellsville.

The first place visited was the store of Rocco Carbicella, Main street, near Third. Sheriff Wright was asked by the state to call the attention of the jury to the main store room, the stock it contained, and the two small rooms immediately in the rear of the store.

Leaving the Carbicella store, the jury was taken to the home of Frank Maggio, 1224 Commerce street. A large crowd of people suddenly appeared in yards of homes in that locality and on the street as soon as the six cars containing the jury and attorneys parked opposiet the Maggio home. A photographer had his camera set on a tripod ready to snap the jury and counsel as they entered the yard of the Maggio residence.

The jury's attention was directed to the short space of yard between the front end of the porch and the front fence where the body of Patrolman Kenney was found riddled with bullet wounds the morning of May 17, last. The jury was then taken into the Maggio home, and the living room and parlor of the house was inspected.

Visit John Amato Home.

Two young women were standing on the side porch of this home when the jury entered the yard. In a rear room of the home was heard the cry of a baby. This was hushed by one of the women who picked up the tot and stood in a doorway observing the jury.

Across the street, to the home of John Amato, the jury was next taken. From Commerce street to an alley in the rear of this house at 1227 Commerce street, there is a passageway. The jurors walked to the rear alley, and then their attention was directed to the two-story frame dwelling at Commerce and Thirteenth street, formerly occupied by Richard Burns, and across Thirteenth street from this dwelling the store and residence of Frank Fusco.

The jurors then walked to the Fusco home. Then attention was directed to a window in the rear of the property. This window, the state charges was broken by Scacutto on the morning of May 17 when he climbed through it to get into the Fusco home. Immediately back of the window is a poultry yard, and the space back of the window is closed with chicken wire.

Reference was made to the Densmore and McIntire homes in the immediate vicinity, and also the direction "up" and "down" on Commerce street from the Maggio home.

The jury then went to Clover alley, and the location of Brick alley, with reference to Thirteenth street, was also pointed out bySheriff Wright. The cars then were driven west on Commerce street to Sixteenth street to Main, thence eastward to the Lisbon-Wellsville road and back to Lisbon.

Coroner Is First Witness.

Ten minutes after the return to Lisbon, the jurors resumed their places in the box.

A blue print of the city of Wellsville was placed on a stand facing the jury. This map was referred to in the opening statement of Attorney W. B. Moore, of defense counsel.

Prosecutor Brookes called Coroner J. M. Van Fossan of East Palestine as the first state witness.

Dr. Van Fossan testified relative to the autopy upon the body of Patrolman Kenney at the McLain morgue in Wellsville. The witness explained that he found one bullet entered at the base of the skull and passed out the right side of the face. The second wound was in the right side just over the hip, and bullet had been deflected upward into the lung. There was one bullet wound in the left heel, the witness explained, the ball passing clear through the heel, and also a wound in the right arm, the bullet shattering the bone. The fifth wound was on the left side of the body, about three inches to the left of the spine.

A bullet was handed the witness by Brookes, and he identified the exhibit as the ball that was taken from the lung of Kenney. A second bullet could not be identified by the witness.

"What wound in your opinion would cause death?" the witness was asked.

"The one in the head and the one in the side, both would cause death," he replied.

"Which of the two wounds would cause death the quickest?"

"The second wound."

There was no cross-examination.

Victim's Widow on Stand.

Placing her young child in the care of a companion, Mrs. Nancy Kenney, widow of the patrolman, who was in court accompanied by the parents of the murder victim was then called to the stand. The witness was weeping as she walked toward the witness box, and brushed a tear from her cheek as she raised her right hand to be sworn by Judge Thomas.

"You are the wife of James Kenney?" she was queried.

"Yes."

"Your husband was a patrolman in the City of Wellsville?"

"He was." "He was a fireman and was later put on the street, just two weeks before this happened."

"Was he an officer May 16, 1926."

"Yes, sir."

"When was the last time you saw your husband?"

"At 11:30 o'clock the night before he died, when he came home for lunch. He remained about half an hour, and left about 12 o'clock. He just took half an hour for lunch that night."

"Was he in uniform?"

"He was."

"What beat did he patrol?"

"Twelfth street to Toronto as we call it."

The defense objected to the latter statement of the witness as it referred to Toronto, and the objection was sustained.

"When did you next see him?"

"When they brought him home in a casket. We then lived at 501 Tenth street.

"Where do you now live?"

"With my mother on Fifteenth street."

"How many children do you have?"

"One four years old and another one year old."

"What do you do now?"

"Run a beauty parlor."

"How old was Mr. Kenney at the time of his death?"

"Twenty-eight."

The witness was not cross-examined.

Zanny Cronin's Testimony.

Defense counsel then asked for a separation of witnesses, but the court was informed by Brookes there were no witnesses for the state in the court room.

Zanny Cronin, residing at Eleventh and White street, Wellsville, was next called by the state. He explained that his residence was a block from Buckeye avenue and two blocks from Thirteenth and Commerce street. He testified that he was in Wellsville the night of May 16 and the morning of May 17.

"Where had you been that night?"

"At Yellow creek, fishing."

"When did you come home?"

"I got at Thirteenth and Commerce street at about 1:45 Sunday morning, May 17. I came up Commerce street to Thirteenth."

"You know Kenney?"

"Yes."

"See Kenney that night or morning?"

"Yes, at Thirteenth and Commerce street."

"Have any conversation with him?"

"Yes."

"Where did you go then?"

"Crossed Thirteenth street at the vacant lot."

Judge Thomas then left the bench and took a place back of the jury box and watched the witness explain certain locations on the map then spread before the jury.

Cronin explained where he stood at Thirteenth and Commerce street.

"Where did you go then?"

"Walked toward Brick alley and Commerce street."

Testifies He Saw Defendant.

"You know the defendant, Nick Scaccutto?"

"Yes, sir."

"See him that night?"

"Yes."

"Speak to him?"

"Yes."

"Did he answer you?"

"If he did, it was in his own tongue."

"Was he alone?"

"No. He was with a short man with a black moustache."

"Where did they go?"

"Got to Commerce street."

"Hear any shots?"

"When I crossed at the pottery I heard shots."

"When I crossed at the pottery I heard shots."

"How many?"

"About eight loud ones and about five weaker shots."

"Hear any before that time?"

"No, sir."

"How long before that did you see Nick?"

"Four or five minutes."

"Hear any more shots after that?"

"No, sir."

"How long have you known Nick?"

"About two years."

"Where did you see him that night?"

"On Commerce street near 'Butch's' place."

"Ever see him any place else?"

"Yes, on Third street, about three or four doors from Main."

"Know where Rocco Carbicella's place is?"

"Yes."

"Was it around Rocco's that you saw Nick?"

"Yes, close to his building, in front."

"That's all, Mr. Cronin."

Admits He Visited Jail.

Attorney Moore then took the witness for cross-examination.

"You say you knew Nick for about two years?"

"About that."

"See him that night?"

"Yes, at Brick alley and Anderson avenue."

"A short man with a black mustach with him?"

"Yes, sir."

"You at the county jail to see him?"

"Not to see him," referring to the defendant.

"What was you there for?"

"To see another man."

"You saw Nick on Thirteenth street?"

"Yes, when I was talking with Kenney."

"What did you go to the jail for?"

"To be certain if he was the man."

"You've testified who was with him?"

"Yes, sir."

"Joe Fusco was pointed out to you as the man who was with Nick?"

"No, sir."

Moore then read from the testimony given before the probate court when application for bail was being heard for the release of Fusco from the county jail on bond. The witness admitted that he had testified as had been read from the record.

"Talk with any one about this case?"

"Only to the Mayor and Chief Fultz."

"Talk today with any one about the case?"

"No, sir."

"Where do you work?"

"At Laughin's in East End."

"How long?"

"About three years."

"You were fishing that night?"

"Yes, alone."

"At Yellow Creek?"

"Yes, sir."

"State whether or not to your knowledge you ever saw the man who was with Nick that night?" Brookes asked in direct examination.

"No."

"You were asked to look at people at the jail to see if any one of them was the one with Nick that night?"

"One of the deputies took me to see if he was the man."

"That's all," Brookes said.

Burns Saw Man in Yard.

The last witness to take the stand Tuesday afternoon was Richard Burns, who formerly resided at Thirteenth and Commerce street, opposite the residence of Frank Fusco, but who has since removed his family to Jefferson county.

Burns described the two-story frame, unpainted residence he formerly occupied, and that he recalled the night that Patrolman Kenney was killed.

"Hear any shooting?" the state asked.

"Yes."

"Tell the jury what you heard."

"Between 2 and 2:30 o'clock the morning of May 17, last, I heard shots. I was asleep, and they awakened me. I leaned over the bed and raised the window, looked out and counted in the neighborhood of eight shots. I soon saw a man come through a yard into Brick alley."

The witness was then asked to point out to the jury on the map the locations he had referred to in seeing the man. He described the location on the map with reference to his home and the alley he saw the man emerge from.

"When the man got to Thirteenth street his left leg gave way on him," the witness went on to relate, and he went to the front gate of the Fusco home. He pounded a minute or so, I then heard glass break. There was an electric light at the corner of Thirteenth and Brick alley.

Points to Scaccuto.

"What kind of a view did you have that night?"

"A clear view."

"You see the man in the court room that you saw go across the lot that night?"

The witness pointed to the defendant.

"Know his name?"

"No, sir."

"How was he walking?"

"His left foot was just balancing him."

"Where was you located that night?"

"I was lying in bed, and I raised the window and looked out."

"How was the man dressed?"

"Light cap and dark coat. I don't know about the pants."

"Have you any difficulty in hearing," the court asked H. B. Dowart, the thirteenth juror sitting in the case. The juror early explained to the court that at times he could not hear well, and he was given the first seat opposite the witness box.

"Hearing perfectly," was his reply.

"Then we're getting along pretty good," the court said with a smile.

"How many shots did you hear that night?" asked Attorney George Farrell on cross-examination.

"I counted eight."

"You got up after the first shot was fired, or after you had counted eight?"

"I didn't get up—laid across the bed and raised the window."

"How long was that?"

"Heard the first shots."

"How long after that before you saw a man come from the back gate?"

"Three minutes at the longest."

"You say he went back?"

"He hesitated, and then came back."

"How long was that?"

"Not over two minutes I'd say."

"Then he came out and went to Fusco's, as you say?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long was it before the man came out of the alley?"

"Not more than three minutes."

"Hear any other shots that night?" asked Assistant Prosecutor Bauknecht.

"No, sir."

"Hear an automobile in that vicinity at the time of the shots?"

"No, I didn't."

"At no time?"

"I heard machines about five minutes later or longer."

Zanny Cronin was then recalled to the witness stand by Brookes.

"Did you note how Nick was dressed that night?"

"Dark suit and light cap."

"The matters you have testified to occurred in the city of Wellsville, county of Columbiana and state of Ohio?"

"Yes, sir."

Court then adjourned until Wednesday morning.

The state has subpoenaed the following 21 witnesses:

Dr. J. M. Van Fossan, Arthur Newton, Fred Herline, J. H. Fultz, Thomas Madden, Dr. McCullough, Frank Fusco, William Paisley, Fred Morgan, Mrs. David Morgan, Sheriff George Wright, W. L. Fogo, Ed Pugh, James Barnes, Mrs. Wilds B. McIntyre, Albert Oyster, Charles Montgomery, Louis Suponora, Mrs. James Kenney, Zanny Cronin and Richard Burns.

The following 15 witnesses have been called by the defense: Frank Fusco, Joseph Fusco, Annie Fusco, Mary Fusco, Merardino Pepe, James Abbato, Frank Maggio, Dominica Maggio, Margaret Maggio, Thereasa Maggio, Nicola Maggio, Michela Mascia, Phillipo Rini, Mamie Rini and Rose Rini.

SOLONS VOTE $12,500 FIRE TRUCK BONDS

Legislation Enacted at Wellsville Council Meeting.

HOSE IS NEEDED

Necessity of Siren Discussed by Members and Ashley.

Legislation authorizing the issuance of $12,500 worth of bonds for the purchase of a Seagraves fire truck and pumper, was enacted last night by city council under emergency rules. The bonds will be in effect for 10 years at five per cent interest rate.

Following the fire truck legislation, President Baker referred to the necessity of a siren and explained the action of one now in use at Stop 55, north of East Liverpool. A siren of this kind, he said, would cost $390.

Although Safety Director George Ashley agreed that the siren probably was a good one, he, together with other council members, also pointed out that the city had no money, after buying the truck, to get one.

It will be necessary, the director explained, to pay for 1,000 feet of new fire hose, too.

Property owners who have holdings jutting out into Beech street will be notified by the city to remove them from the street as a result of council action. Councilman Connor introduced a deed, dated in 1893, to show that Beech street was at that time and has been since then, an open street.

Standard Oil company was granted permission to lay a three-inch pipe line to their lot at Third and Lisbon streets in an ordinance passed by council. A similar right also was extended to Thomas Hibbins who will lay pipe lines from the railroad switch to a piece of ground just east of the Little Yellow creek street car bridge and opposite the mill playground.

Rocco Carbicella Store and Frank Maggio Home Inspected.

MAP IN COURT

Four State Witnesses Testify Tuesday Afternoon.

In the custody of Sheriff George Wright and accompanying the jury that will determine his fate, Nick Scaccuto yesterday afternoon gazed into the yard of the Frank Maggio home, Commerce street, where police last May picked up the bullet-riddled body of Patrolman James Kenney, 28, for whose murder Scaccuto is on trial in common pleas court at Lisbon.

Scaccuto rode with Sheriff Wright and Deputies Lawrence Kindsvatter and Edward J. Fitzgerald. State and defense counsel were also members of the party.

The jury left Lisbon at 2:15 o'clock, accompanied by counsel for the state and defendant. Judge David H. Thomas, of Marietta, who will hear the case, also was a member of the party, announcing a desire to acquaint himself with the locations that may be referred to during the course of the trial.

Dr. J. M. VanFossan, of East Palestine, county coroner, took the stand as the first witness for the prosecution as the court reconvened following the Wellsville trip. He was placed under direct examination by Prosecuting Attorney Robert M. Brookes. Three other witnesses were called before court adjourned at 4:55 o'clock, including Mrs. Nancy Kenney, widow of the slain patrolman; Zanny Cronin, of Wellsville, and Richard Burns, of Jefferson county, a former Wellsville resident.

Defense attorneys are George T. Farrell and W. B. Moore, of Lisbon, and James E. O'Grady, of Wellsville.

The first place visited was the store of Rocco Carbicella, Main street, near Third. Sheriff Wright was asked by the state to call the attention of the jury to the main store room, the stock it contained, and the two small rooms immediately in the rear of the store.

Leaving the Carbicella store, the jury was taken to the home of Frank Maggio, 1224 Commerce street. A large crowd of people suddenly appeared in yards of homes in that locality and on the street as soon as the six cars containing the jury and attorneys parked opposiet the Maggio home. A photographer had his camera set on a tripod ready to snap the jury and counsel as they entered the yard of the Maggio residence.

The jury's attention was directed to the short space of yard between the front end of the porch and the front fence where the body of Patrolman Kenney was found riddled with bullet wounds the morning of May 17, last. The jury was then taken into the Maggio home, and the living room and parlor of the house was inspected.

Visit John Amato Home.

Two young women were standing on the side porch of this home when the jury entered the yard. In a rear room of the home was heard the cry of a baby. This was hushed by one of the women who picked up the tot and stood in a doorway observing the jury.

Across the street, to the home of John Amato, the jury was next taken. From Commerce street to an alley in the rear of this house at 1227 Commerce street, there is a passageway. The jurors walked to the rear alley, and then their attention was directed to the two-story frame dwelling at Commerce and Thirteenth street, formerly occupied by Richard Burns, and across Thirteenth street from this dwelling the store and residence of Frank Fusco.

The jurors then walked to the Fusco home. Then attention was directed to a window in the rear of the property. This window, the state charges was broken by Scacutto on the morning of May 17 when he climbed through it to get into the Fusco home. Immediately back of the window is a poultry yard, and the space back of the window is closed with chicken wire.

Reference was made to the Densmore and McIntire homes in the immediate vicinity, and also the direction "up" and "down" on Commerce street from the Maggio home.

The jury then went to Clover alley, and the location of Brick alley, with reference to Thirteenth street, was also pointed out bySheriff Wright. The cars then were driven west on Commerce street to Sixteenth street to Main, thence eastward to the Lisbon-Wellsville road and back to Lisbon.

Coroner Is First Witness.

Ten minutes after the return to Lisbon, the jurors resumed their places in the box.

A blue print of the city of Wellsville was placed on a stand facing the jury. This map was referred to in the opening statement of Attorney W. B. Moore, of defense counsel.

Prosecutor Brookes called Coroner J. M. Van Fossan of East Palestine as the first state witness.

Dr. Van Fossan testified relative to the autopy upon the body of Patrolman Kenney at the McLain morgue in Wellsville. The witness explained that he found one bullet entered at the base of the skull and passed out the right side of the face. The second wound was in the right side just over the hip, and bullet had been deflected upward into the lung. There was one bullet wound in the left heel, the witness explained, the ball passing clear through the heel, and also a wound in the right arm, the bullet shattering the bone. The fifth wound was on the left side of the body, about three inches to the left of the spine.

A bullet was handed the witness by Brookes, and he identified the exhibit as the ball that was taken from the lung of Kenney. A second bullet could not be identified by the witness.

"What wound in your opinion would cause death?" the witness was asked.

"The one in the head and the one in the side, both would cause death," he replied.

"Which of the two wounds would cause death the quickest?"

"The second wound."

There was no cross-examination.

Victim's Widow on Stand.

Placing her young child in the care of a companion, Mrs. Nancy Kenney, widow of the patrolman, who was in court accompanied by the parents of the murder victim was then called to the stand. The witness was weeping as she walked toward the witness box, and brushed a tear from her cheek as she raised her right hand to be sworn by Judge Thomas.

"You are the wife of James Kenney?" she was queried.

"Yes."

"Your husband was a patrolman in the City of Wellsville?"

"He was." "He was a fireman and was later put on the street, just two weeks before this happened."

"Was he an officer May 16, 1926."

"Yes, sir."

"When was the last time you saw your husband?"

"At 11:30 o'clock the night before he died, when he came home for lunch. He remained about half an hour, and left about 12 o'clock. He just took half an hour for lunch that night."

"Was he in uniform?"

"He was."

"What beat did he patrol?"

"Twelfth street to Toronto as we call it."

The defense objected to the latter statement of the witness as it referred to Toronto, and the objection was sustained.

"When did you next see him?"

"When they brought him home in a casket. We then lived at 501 Tenth street.

"Where do you now live?"

"With my mother on Fifteenth street."

"How many children do you have?"

"One four years old and another one year old."

"What do you do now?"

"Run a beauty parlor."

"How old was Mr. Kenney at the time of his death?"

"Twenty-eight."

The witness was not cross-examined.

Zanny Cronin's Testimony.

Defense counsel then asked for a separation of witnesses, but the court was informed by Brookes there were no witnesses for the state in the court room.

Zanny Cronin, residing at Eleventh and White street, Wellsville, was next called by the state. He explained that his residence was a block from Buckeye avenue and two blocks from Thirteenth and Commerce street. He testified that he was in Wellsville the night of May 16 and the morning of May 17.

"Where had you been that night?"

"At Yellow creek, fishing."

"When did you come home?"

"I got at Thirteenth and Commerce street at about 1:45 Sunday morning, May 17. I came up Commerce street to Thirteenth."

"You know Kenney?"

"Yes."

"See Kenney that night or morning?"

'Yes, at Thirteenth and Commerce street."

"Have any conversation with him?"

"Yes."

"Where did you go then?"

"Crossed Thirteenth street at the vacant lot."

Judge Thomas then left the bench and took a place back of the jury box and watched the witness explain certain locations on the map then spread before the jury.

Cronin explained where he stood at Thirteenth and Commerce street.

"Where did you go then?"

"Walked toward Brick alley and Commerce street."

Testifies He Saw Defendant.

"You know the defendant, Nick Scaccutto?"

"Yes, sir."

"See him that night?"

"Yes."

'Speak to him?"

"Yes."

'Did he answer you?"

"If he did, it was in his own tongue."

"Was he alone?"

"No. He was with a short man with a black moustache."

"Where did they go?"

"Got to Commerce street."

"Hear any shots?"

"When I crossed at the pottery I heard shots."

'When I crossed at the pottery I heard shots."

"How many?"

"About eight loud ones and about five weaker shots."

'Hear any before that time?"

"No, sir."

"How long before that did you see Nick?"

"Four or five minutes."

"Hear any more shots after that?"

"No, sir."

"How long have you known Nick?"

"About two years."

"Where did you see him that night?"

"On Commerce street near 'Butch's' place."

"Ever see him any place else?"

"Yes, on Third street, about three or four doors from Main."

'Know where Rocco Carbicella's place is?"

"Yes."

"Was it around Rocco's that you saw Nick?"

"Yes, close to his building, in front."

"That's all, Mr. Cronin."

Admits He Visited Jail.

Attorney Moore then took the witness for cross-examination.

"You say you knew Nick for about two years?"

"About that."

"See him that night?"

"Yes, at Brick alley and Anderson avenue."

"A short man with a black mustach with him?"

"Yes, sir."

"You at the county jail to see him?"

"Not to see him," referring to the defendant.

"What was you there for?"

"To see another man."

"You saw Nick on Thirteenth street?"

"Yes, when I was talking with Kenney."

"What did you go to the jail for?"

"To be certain if he was the man."

"You've testified who was with him?"

"Yes, sir."

"Joe Fusco was pointed out to you as the man who was with Nick?"

"No, sir."

Moore then read from the testimony given before the probate court when application for bail was being heard for the release of Fusco from the county jail on bond. The witness admitted that he had testified as had been read from the record.

"Talk with any one about this case?"

"Only to the Mayor and Chief Fultz."

"Talk today with any one about the case?"

"No, sir."

"Where do you work?"

"At Laughin's in East End."

"How long?"

"About three years."

"You were fishing that night?"

"Yes, alone."

"At Yellow Creek?"

"Yes, sir."

"State whether or not to your knowledge you ever saw the man who was with Nick that night?" Brookes asked in direct examination.

"No."

"You were asked to look at people at the jail to see if any one of them was the one with Nick that night?"

"One of the deputies took me to see if he was the man."

"That's all," Brookes said.

Burns Saw Man in Yard.

The last witness to take the stand Tuesday afternoon was Richard Burns, who formerly resided at Thirteenth and Commerce street, opposite the residence of Frank Fusco, but who has since removed his family to Jefferson county.

Burns described the two-story frame, unpainted residence he formerly occupied, and that he recalled the night that Patrolman Kenney was killed.

"Hear any shooting?" the state asked.

"Yes."

"Tell the jury what you heard."

"Between 2 and 2:30 o'clock the morning of May 17, last, I heard shots. I was asleep, and they awakened me. I leaned over the bed and raised the window, looked out and counted in the neighborhood of eight shots. I soon saw a man come through a yard into Brick alley."

The witness was then asked to point out to the jury on the map the locations he had referred to in seeing the man. He described the location on the map with reference to his home and the alley he saw the man emerge from.

"When the man got to Thirteenth street his left leg gave way on him," the witness went on to relate, and he went to the front gate of the Fusco home. He pounded a minute or so. I then heard glass break. There was an electric light at the corner of Thirteenth and Brick alley.

Points to Scaccuto.

"What kind of a view did you have that night?"

"A clear view."

"You see the man in the court room that you saw go across the lot that night?"

The witness pointed to the defendant.

"Know his name?"

"No, sir."

"How was he walking?"

"Where was you located that night?"

"I was lying in bed, and I raised the window and looked out."

"How was the man dressed?"

"Light cap and dark coat. I don't know about the pants."

"Have you any difficulty in hearing," the court asked H. B. Dowart, the thirteenth juror sitting in the case. The juror early explained to the court that at times he could not hear well, and he was given the first seat opposite the witness box.

"Hearing perfectly," was his reply.

"Then we're getting along pretty good," the court said with a smile.

"How many shots did you hear that night?" asked Attorney George Farrell on cross-examination.

"I counted eight."

"You got up after the first shot was fired, or after you had counted eight?"

"I didn't get up—laid across the bed and raised the window."

"How long was that?"

"Heard the first shots."

"How long after that before you saw a man come from the back gate?"

"Three minutes at the longest."

"You say he went back?"

"He hesitated, and then came back."

"How long was that?"

"Not over two minutes I'd say."

"Then he came out and went to Fusco's, as you say?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long was it before the man came out of the alley?"

"Not more than three minutes."

"Hear any other shots that night?" asked Assistant Prosecutor Bauknecht.

"No, sir."

"Hear an automobile in that vicinity at the time of the shots?"

"No, I didn't."

"At no time?"

"I heard machines about five minutes later or longer."

Zanny Cronin was then recalled to the witness stand by Brookes.

"Did you note how Nick was dressed that night?"

"Dark suit and light cap."

"The matters you have testified to occurred in the city of Wellsville, county of Columbiana and state of Ohio?"

"Yes, sir."

Court then adjourned until Wednesday morning.

The state has subpoenaed the following 21 witnesses:

Dr. J. M. Van Fossan, Arthur Newton, Fred Herline, J. H. Fultz, Thomas Madden, Dr. McCullough, Frank Fusco, William Paisley, Fred Morgan, Mrs. David Morgan, Sheriff George Wright, W. L. SOLONS VOTE $12,500 FIRE TRUCK BONDS

Legislation Enacted at Wellsville Council Meeting.

HOSE IS NEEDED

Necessity of Siren Discussed by Members and Ashley.

Legislation authorizing the issuance of $12,500 worth of bonds for the purchase of a Seagraves fire truck and pumper, was enacted last night by city council under emergency rules. The bonds will be in effect for 10 years at five per cent interest rate.

Following the fire truck legislation, President Baker referred to the necessity of a siren and explained the action of one now in use at Stop 55, north of East Liverpool. A siren of this kind, he said, would cost $390.

Although Safety Director George Ashley agreed that the siren probably was a good one, he, together with other council members, also pointed out that the city had no money, after buying the truck, to get one.

It will be necessary, the director explained, to pay for 1,000 feet of new fire hose, too.

Property owners who have holdings jutting out into Beech street will be notified by the city to remove them from the street as a result of council action. Councilman Connor introduced a deed, dated in 1893, to show that Beech street was at that time and has been since then, an open street.

Standard Oil company was granted permission to lay a three-inch pipe line to their lot at Third and Lisbon streets in an ordinance passed by council. A similar right also was extended to Thomas Hibbins who will lay pipe lines from the railroad switch to a piece of ground just east of the Little Yellow creek street car bridge and opposite the mill playground.

Solons transferred $750 from the safety to the general fund for current expenses, by resolution. An ordinance also was adopted providing supplementary appropriations for the safety fund, fire station, $50; service fund, garbage disposal, $100, and water fund, supply and maintenance, $500.

The Ohio Power company will be instructed to light 26 more white way lamps as a result of recommendations of the street and light committee which recently completed a survey of white way needs.

City Auditor Eckfeld's report follows:

General fund, $247.87; safety, $1,679.51; health, $605.59; service, $3,257.26; water, $3,096.59; cemetery, $2,057.32; library, $299.07; special water, $29,954.62; gasoline tax, $4,190.13; auto license, $2,846.42; cemetery trust, $542.82; firemen's indemnity, $350.06; sinking fund, $58,970.97.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TO GIVE PROGRAM

Arrangements have been perfected for the White Gifts entertainment which will be held on Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the First United Presbyterian church.

"The Holy Story" will be given in pantomime, in addition to other features by the Sunday school. A Christmas treat also will be given to the class members.

White Gifts offerings also will be received.

December Income Tax Collections Hit Record Mark

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—December income tax collections have far exceeded expectations and will be the largest last quarter payments in the last five years. The treasury announced today, collections up to Saturday were $303,573,000, about $45,000,000 ahead of last year. The total will equal the September collection of $442,000,000, officials said.

Collections for the year are $921,185,000, or $164,000,000 ahead of last year.

The present surplus is $70,000,000 ahead of last year, which indicates, officials said, that the year's surplus would be about $500,000,000.

FRANCE ALL SET TO STAND PAT ON WAR DEBT

Parliament Will Refuse to Ratify Pact by Berenger.

OUTLINES VIEW

Moderates Claim Action Will Not Hurt Franc.

PARIS.—The French Parliament will never ratify the Mellon-Berenger debt accord as it now stands. France will lose nothing by refusing to ratify the agreement.

Those are the opinions of Deputy Adrien Dariac, one of the so-called "moderate" members of the French Chamber of Deputies. His views are important because they will probably influence the Chamber sub-commission on debts, over which he presides, when the sub-commission reports to the Chamber Financial Commission the advisable course of action to adopt with regard to both the American and British debts.

"I do not believe failure to ratify the Washington agreement will cause a renewed fall of the franc" Deputy Dariac declared in an exclusive interview with International News Service. "Don't forget that during the Caillaux negotiations in Washington the fall of the franc was more rapid than before.

"Did the signature of the Mellon-Berenger accord provoke an irresistable increase in the value of the franc? It most certainly did not.

Never Denied Debts.

"France has never denied her debts, nor will she ever deny them. She wants to pay. But what is the amount of the American debt exactly?"

Asked if he did not believe that the Mellon-Berenger accord settled that point, M. Dariac replied:

"I agree that we were granted appreciable reductions, but there is no doubt that the amount decided upon for payment is still too high. Furthermore can France compromise her financial situation irrevocably by agreeing to pay such large annuities, unless safety and transfer clauses minimize the risks?

"How could America treat her old associate, France, so harshly, after France made such enormous sacrifices for the common victory; after France, instead of defaulting Germany made financial sacrifices to restore the devastated regions, when the treaty gave an incontestable priority on this point?

"On recommendation of our own creditors did we not grant to Germany a reduction of our claims on her, including safety and transfer clauses, preventing uncomfortable surprises for Germany in making her regular Dawes plan payments?

"From the French point of view we have nothing to lose in trying to mark time. The Mellon-Berenger accord, drawn up to precipitately, satisfies one in France.

"I do not hesitate to say that the government would be taking grave risks in asking the immediate ratification of the Washington accord, even preceded by the reservations to which M. Ponicare has referred many times."

Reservations Useless.

M. Dariac admitted that such reservations, being unilateral, would have no value, binding only France.

"Then what is the solution?" the correspondent asked M. Dariac.

"There is only one," he replied. "Revision!"

M. Dariac repeated a suggestion made recently by himself in a speech in his constituency, that the entire question of debts be turned over to the League of Nations or the Court of International Justice and Arbitration at The Hague.

"I see no objection to making reparations an international question," he declared, "especially if it will lead to eventual annulation of both debts and reparations. In that way a permanent factor of discord would disappear, peace would be assured, the work of Locarno consolidated and the hopes of Thoiry made realizeable."

Delaying debt ratification cannot inconvenience the United States, M. Dariac believes.

Makes Haste Slowly.

"The United State has nothing to lose," he said. "France has the firm desire to pay what she owes, but only what she owes and under conditions that do not ruin her. She therefore has a perfect right to demand an equitable revision of the accords already signed.

M. Poincare did tell M. Henry Simon, president of the Chamber of finane commission, that he would demand ratification of the debt agreements before the end of the year.

"Immediately from all corners of France came vehement protests. The protest of war veterans made a big impression upon M. Poincare. Today he looks at the matter differently.

" In such matters it does not pay to work fast. I believe England, Italy and Belgium made big mistakes in ratifying their agreements so quickly. "It is better to make haste slowly."

Proposal Launched To Create Corps of Dominion Guards

LONDON.—A proposal is afoot to create a Corps of Dominions Guards in Britain to take their place alongside the other Guards' regiments.

The idea is for this special unit to be formed on the lines of the Brigade of Guards, with men from each Dominion and Protectorate in the British Empire to take part.

Each unit would be officered by men from the Dominion it represented, and its cost would be borne by the Treasury of its country.

Central headquarters would be in London, but sections of the corps would be periodically assigned to duties in various parts of the Empire.

Such a force, it is stated, would be a very valuable nucleus of a large overseas contingent in case of emergency.

U. S. DRY FORCES RAID 58 NIGHT CLUBS AND CABARETS

YULE SEASON GAYETY HIT IN RUM CLEAN-UP

Seven Squads Co-operate in New York City Offensive.

PADLOCK DOORS

Agents Posing as "Butter and Egg Men," Get Evidence.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.— United States prohibition forces, on the very eve of the holiday season of gayety, struck their hardest blow against New York's night life early today.

Seven parties made up of assistant United States attorneys, policemen, federal prohibition agents and deputy United States marshals, all acting under direction of United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner, served personal injunctions and bills of complaint in padlock proceedings on 58 of the city's best known life clubs, cabarets and restaurants.

The raids followed an investigation of three months carried out by agents posing as "rich butter and egg men" and distinguished visitors from abroad. Directed by Major Chester P. Mills, of the prohibition enforcement branch, the agents ingratiated themselves by the lavish use of money and easily gained all the evidence they needed to start proceedings against many night clubs and cabarets in and on the fringe of the bright light district.

Well Known Clubs Visited.

Places visited included such well known clubs as Texas Guinan's 300 club, the Club Dover, Helen Morgan's Fifty-Fourth street club, the Cafe de Paris, Dinty Moore's club, the Club Anatole, the Palladium club, the Club Richman, Barney's, Del Fay club, Mort's restaurant, Texas Tommy Guinan's Playground, the Embassy club, the Club Biarritz and the Hawaiian club.

The raiders set out at 10 o'clock last night and at dawn today they were still busy. Prohibition officials described the offensive as "a complete success" and predicted that this would be the dryest Christmas and New Year's New York has known since prohibition went into effect.

It was declared that the bills of complaint would make the owners of the club liable to arrest if they attempted to disregard the padlock proceedings and start up in business again.

Crowds of men and women in evening dress who were dancing, dining and perhaps drinking in the fashionable night clubs, watched the proceedings. There were cries of anger and dismay as the revelry was halted in some of the places.

BESIDES, Balfour is still alive. How do we know the British will not send him to make us junk those new cruisers when half finished, as we junked a number of magnificent, half finished battleships, at Britain's request, some time ago?

THOSE that bought good stocks in time have a cheerful Christmas ahead, and have had part of it already. "Big Steel" cut a melon that means at least $225,000,000. And within a month assorted melons totaling $750,000,000 more are expected.

THIS country's income, about one hundred billions a year, is only the beginning of national prosperity. Such a country is really worth protecting, and with something better than hopes.

Two Men are Held By Police Upon Girl's Complaint

Theft of Copper Wire Delays All Erie Road Trains

CLEVELAND, Dec. 22.—Thieves who stole nearly 50,000 feet of copper wire, connecting telegraph and signal systems, caused delay of several hours to all Erie railroad trains out of here today.

Interruptions to the wires caused signal lights to show danger signals, preventing the trains from moving.

Three suspects have been arrested.

Rudner Denies Plot

3 a. m. The doctor there lanced my finger and gave me some sleeping pills. I went back home early in the morning of July 9th and went to bed."

"Did you ever know this man McDermott?"

"No."

"Did you ever see him in your store?"

"No."

Accounts for Night of Murder.

Then Rudner accounted for July 15th, the night of the murder, and for July 26th, the date the prosecution charges McDermott telephoned Rudner in Massillon from Akron and later visited Rudner to get "paid off."

Rudner testified he was away on an automobile ride to Brewster on July 26. He told of a visit on July 15th to Canton police headquarters to complain to S. A. Lengel, police chief, concerning some windows being broken in his store.

He drove to Massillon and "met a lady friend of mine," Rudner testified.

"It was about 10:30 p. m., and we went to a party at Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fessler's. I stayed there until 12:30 midnight. Then with four others we drove from Canton to Akron to Massillon, picked up another young lady in Massillon and went back to Canton for something to eat in a restaurant."

When he got back to Massillon at about 4:30 a. m., the witness said he met Policeman J. W. Smith, who told him "a murder has been committed over in Canton."

"I drove right back to Canton and talked with the boys in police headquarters," Rudner said.

Former Policeman Testifies.

As Floyd Streitenberger, former Canton policeman, now living in Fairfield, Ohio, resumed the witness stand today, Prosecutor McClintock attempted to cross-examine him regarding a purported newspaper interview in Buffalo, quoting him as saying he could furnish an alibi for Louis Mazer.

The court ruled out questions along these lines.

"Did Mazer have a gun when he visited you?"

"No," the witness answered.

Frank J. Hartman, lawyer, of Evansburg, Pa., who represented the McDermott family in the negotiations for the surrender of Pat was the next witness. He gave his testimony in a whisper to the court stenographer for the record, the judge not permitting the recital to be heard by the jury.

Kascholk's Wife on Stand.

Mrs. Steve Kascholk, wife of the state's star witness, then took the stand as a defense witness to impeach her husband's testimony. She said she had lived with Kascholk for three months in Nanty Glo, Pa., and said that he deserted her child.

"What did Steve do in Nanty Glo?"

"He didn't do anything."

"Have you ever seen Pat McDermott before?"

"No."

J. H. Stevens, another witness, testified that while in the workhouse he talked with Kascholk about the Mellett case.

"Steve said he didn't know anything about the murder but he was trying to get some dough out of it," the witness testified.

Kascholk furnished the state with incriminating testimony against McDermott, testifying that he and McDermott looked over the Mellett home but that he (Kascholk) was afraid of the "job" and left town.

Prosecution Charges "Frame-up."

The spirit of Christmastide is obviously lacking in the attitude of opposing counsel. Defense counsel had charged in open court that the prosecution is attempting "to frame McDermott in order to satisfy the public hue and cry and because of political ambitions."

The defense entered on the record the allegations that the prosecution promised McDermott he would "be turned out on the bricks" if he would surrender and tell all he knew; that they "didn't care about anything but 'getting Rudner,'" and that McDermott after he surrendered declared he "had nothing to confess."

Prosecutor C. B. McClintock denied he made any trade with the defendant or his relatives other than to promise him "a square deal."

Speaker Denies Charge

penny on that or any other game and was entirely ignorant of any bets being made until, as I said before, in June. It seems strange the powers-that-be of baseball should take the work of a man of Leonard's calibre when my name does not appear in the case.

"I have been told when Leonard was waived out of the American League that he made the statement that I was a fine kind of a friend to have and that he would 'get me.' I must say he took a fine way to make good on his threat. He should have taken into consideration that I was only the manager, not the owner of a ball club, and that I had an obligation to my employer, the late James C. Dunn, to protect his interests by not adding a man to the club roster whom I knew in my heart had run his race as a major league pitcher.

Trying Ordeal, Says Tris.

"It has been a terrible strain and trying ordeal for me but there is real satisfaction in knowing that my name is not connected with the case in any manner except by word of mouth of a veritable Judas. I feel confident the day will come when Leonard, if he has a spark of manhood in him, will agree to appear before Landis and clear my name. I am absolutely guiltless.

"In conclusion I want to say that the testimony together with the explanation given by both Wood and Cobb proves there was no thought of wrong-doing on the part of either man. And there is absolutely nothing to show the ball game was fixed."

Seven Believed Lost When Big Sandy River Bridge Falls

TWO DEAD AS KENTUCKY IS HIT BY FLOOD

Lowlands Along Two Rivers are Completely Under Water.

BOAT CAPSIZES

No Danger Along Ohio Valley, Says Observer.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 22. — Two were dead today in the van of one of the most disastrous floods in the history of the lowlands along the Kentucky and Cumberland rivers.

A. D. Howard, merchant, and Calvin Goings, farmer, were drowned when the boat in which they and Herschel Goings and Huston Cuzick were crossing the Kentucky river capsized against driftwood.

Lowlands in seven counties are completely under water and two counties are cut off from the outside world, as a result of the heavy rains of the past several days.

Water near Corbin was four feet above the highway and travel was at a standstill. Many Corbin families were forced to flee from their homes.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 22.—Although rivers in Kentucky, West Virginia and Tennessee are expected to pass the flood stage by tonight, the Ohio River will be able to absorb the overflow without serious flood menace to the Ohio valley in general, U. S. Weather Observer W. C. Deveraux said today in quieting current rumors that a serious flood was in view.

The Ohio river is expected to reach a stage of 18 or 20 feet in East Liverpool early Friday, according to employes at U. S. dam No. 8. The river was reported to be rising at noon today when the 11-foot mark was registered. No flood stage is expected here.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 22.—Elmer G. Myers, the losing pitcher in the now famous game between Detroit and Cleveland, played on September 25, 1919, declared today that it was only an ordinary game to him, and that if it was "fixed" he knew nothing about it.

"Speaker never gave me any instructions as to how to pitch that game," said Myers. "I pitched to win."

The Tigers pounded Myers for 18 hits and won the game, 9 to 5. Myers, who makes his home here and last season was a member of the Orioles, also declared he knew nothing of any betting on the game.

Winning Pitcher's Statement.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 22.—Bernie Boland, who pitched the fateful game of Sept. 25, 1919, for the Detroit Tigers and who now is a cement contractor in this city, having given up baseball several years ago, today declared that he knew nothing out of the way in the game in question.

Asked if he were aware that the game was "thrown," Bernie said:

"So far as I know everything was O. K. on this game. I was given the pitching assignment in a regular way and went out to win it. The statement of Landis was the first I ever heard of anything crooked connected with the game.

"I have not been questioned by anyone regarding the game and it's hard to believe that Cobb was a party to anything of this sort."

Ban Johnson's Statement.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—"The American league always has been able to lay a heavy hand upon those in its ranks who do not behave."

This was the opening shot in a statement issued today by B. B. Johnson, president of the American league concerning the diamond's new baseball scandal.

Johnson is credited in some quarters with instigating the entire investigation which involved Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker.

The American league boss expressed sympathy for Speaker's 82-year-old mother.

"I am saddened to think she will be forced to bear the thought of this to her grave," he said. "Ty Cobb has a large family. Joe Wood has two boys in school in the east. It is too bad that these innocent persons must bear the brunt of the scandal."

Johnson said he "regretted" the occurence more than he could "express."

Speed Scaccuto Trial

men. He testified he retired about 2:15 a. m., and that he heard reports from guns and that as he looked at the clock he heard other shots. Then he got up and went down the street. He then came back and called the fire station. He testified that he went to the Maggio house and saw the body of Patrolman Kenney lying in the front yard between the walk and the fence near a flower pot. He also said he saw the tracks of women's shoes on the ground.

Under cross examination by Attorney George T. Farrell, Morgan testified he heard 10 or 12 shots, five of which were in quick succession. Farrell then asked the witness to tap on the witness box about how fast these shots were fired and the witness did as directed.

He went on to relate that he had seen the Carbicella automobile many times before.

Frank Fusco's Testimony.

Frank Fusco, under direct examination by Prosecutor Brookes, testified he lived in 13th street, that he was home the night Patrolman Kenney was shot, that Scaccuto formerly boarded with them and that he had known Nick for several years.

At this point of the testimony Bennie Pepe, who was sitting at the defense counsel table, was sworn as an interpreter by Judge Thomas and quetions and answers were given the jury through him. Fusco, continuing, said that he was in bed when Scaccuto called him, that Nick got into their house by breaking a window and that Scaccuto was in bed when he first saw him.

Fusco testified that when he began to talk to Scaccuto, the defendant told him to let him sleep and he did not say how he was wounded. Fusco said Nick told him he would pay for the window he broke. Fusco said he did not hear any shots.

When cross examined by Attorney James E. O'Grady, Fusco testified that Scaccuto had boarded with them for about three months but this was five or six months before Kenney was shot.

Fred L. Herline is Witness.

Fred L. Herline, under direct examination by Assistant Prosecutor Bauknecht, testified he was standing in front of the Wellsville city hall the night Kenney was killed and that he had heard a number of shots. He said that he and Oyster went down Main street toward Thirteenth and that they met a car between Ninth and Tenth streets, finished in dull red and having disk wheels. He said that Rocco Carbicella was in the front seat. The witness also said he visited the murder scene and described conditions in the front yard where the body was found. Kenney was lying on his left side with his face on the ground, he testified.

He said he found a .38 caliber bullet near a flower vase which had been upset and that Sheriff Wright found a chip off another bullet. He testified that the ground looked as if there had been some scuffling. He also said he found a guitar in the yard, near the east fence.

The witness, cross-examined by Attorney Moore, testified that he went to the Maggio home alone and told of the crowds gathering about the front yard.

Mrs. Wilda McIntyre, under direct examination by Prosecutor Brookes, testified that she had walked over to the Maggio home after the shooting and that she saw Kenney lying on the ground and that she heard him draw two or three breaths. She said she was there when Patrolman Barnes arrived and that there was no one there when she reached the scene.

The witness was not cross examined.

Edward Pugh Questioned.

Edward Pugh was examined by Prosecutor Brookes. He said he was on duty at Fifth and Main streets when the shooting occurred and that he had called Oyster and Herline to find where the shots came from. He testified he saw Carbicella drive up Main street in his own car and when the witness went to the Maggio home shortly before 3 o'clock the body of Kenney was still in the yard.

Pugh swore that a revolver (state's exhibit No. 3) a .38 caliber weapon, was found in Kenney's hand when he arrived at the Maggio home. He said he didn't examine it. He testified Mayor Fogo took the revolver out of Kenney's hand but the witness did not examine the revolver.

Soon after he arrived at the Maggio home, the witness said, they brought in a couple of stills from houses between Eleventh and Twelfth street in Commerce.

He said he was in Fusco's home when they had finished dressing Scaccuto's wounds.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Farrell, Pugh said he was at the Fusco home about an hour.

Traced Drops of Blood.

Thomas Madden, 1017 Center street, in direct examination by Bauknecht, testified of being at the Fusco home with the mayor and policemen and that they traced drops of blood into the Fusco yard and saw a broken window.

The witness testified they went upstairs and saw Scaccuto in bed with one foot lying over another and that his leg was bandaged.

Madden testified that the defendant, when he saw him in the Fusco home, looked like a colored man, but that the nurses cleaned him up at the hospital.

Mayor Fogo, when examined by Prosecutor Brookes, testified that Officer Barnes came to his home at 2:30 o'clock the morning of May 17. Fogo said he went to the Maggio home and saw the body of Patrolman Kenney lying between a flower vase and a fence. He said Kenney had a uniform on, that he turned the body over, and took a revolver from the patrolman's hand. The witness identified the revolver.

He said that all the shells in the gun had been exploded.

A pair of blue trousers, worn by Kenney the night he was killed, was then shown the witness. The bullet holes in the cloth and the blood stains were identified as those observed after Kenney had been disrobed.

Mayor Fogo also said that he had visited the Fusco home, saw Scaccuto in bed with his leg bandaged, and a pair of scissors lying on the bed near him. The wounds, the witness said, were in the left leg.

Fogo testified that he said "Hello, Nick, how did this happen?" and that Scaccuto replied, "I was walking on the street and someone shot."

The witness said the defendant could not talk good.

The efficiency of Patrolman Kenney was praised by the witness.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Moore, the mayor testified there was dark and light lint on the fence near where the body of Kenney was found.

Acting Chief's Story.

Arthur Newton, acting chief of police, was examined by Prosecutor Brookes. He told of the time of death of Kenney and of going to the Maggio home shortly afterwards and that later he went to the Fusco home when he placed Scaccuto under arrest. Officer Barnes went to the Fusco home with him. He testified he saw Scaccuto in bed and that after he had examined him he had placed him under arrest. Newton testified that Scaccuto said to him, "I got shot on the street," and that the defendant "didn't say anything else" to him at the house. He said Dr. McCulloch dressed the wound and that when Newton asked Scaccuto why he didn't report the shooting that Scaccuto refused to answer him.

State exhibits 6 and 7 were identified by the witness as bullets found near the place.

Newton testified that Scaccuto had been around the Carbicella store, and that Scaccuto told him he was running the store. He also told of locating the Carbicella car in the garage of his father-in-law. He also said that Scaccuto has been arrested for violating the liquor law and that the charge against him was dismissed by Mayor Fogo for lack of evidence.

Charles Montgomery said he was in the East Liverpool hospital when J. H. Fultz asked Scaccuto "which way he ran when he shot Kenney," and that Scaccuto said, "Up the street."

Under cross-examination by Attorney Moore, Montgomery said that Fultz asked him to go to the hospital with him and that while in the emergency room Scaccuto seemed to be suffering and talked in broken language.

A 15-hour search for Doris Mountford, 8, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mountford, 1009 Riverview street, ended shortly after 8 o'clock this morning when the child was found by her father on Bank street.

When the girl who attends the McKinley school failed to return to her home last evening, her father combed the hillside in the vicinity of Beechwood and the Northside.

She said that she had stayed in a Northside store until the proprietor closed the place last evening and spent the remainder of the night on the front porch of a McKinnon avenue residence, fearing to return home.

Mountford located the child as she was on her way to school.

BANKER FOILS HOLD-UP MAN

Frustrates Columbus Robbery Attempt by Quick Thinking.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 22.—Teller J. J. Brown, of the City National bank, today frustrated a bandit's attempt to rob him of $1,000 by thinking an instant faster than the man behind the gun.

While scores of clerks and customers hurried about the unmasked man approached Brown's cage and passed the teller a note. Under his arm he carried a folded newspaper.

'Hand me $1,000 in big bills, I shoot straight O. K.." read the greasy folded paper.

Brown looked up and into the shining muzzle of a gun.

"I'll have to get it for you," countered Brown, sparring for time.

"Don't stall, Buddy," snarled the young robber. "I'll count three before I shoot."

The bandit opened his lips to count when Brown dropped beneath the marble counter of his cage, and yelled for help, frightening the gunman who fled, brandishing his weapon.

Christmas shoppers made way for the man as he fled into an alley.

Brown has failed to identify several suspects arrested by the police.

Both had fully recovered today.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKETS

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—With the exception of the motor stocks and a few of the specialties, prices of active stocks were slightly lower in early trading today. The market was still under the influence of profit taking and professional selling, based on the tigher money situation and the prospect of a withdrawal of outside traders over the holidays.

A few additions were made to the list of corporations revising their dividends upward. Julius Kayser went on a $4 dividend basis as forecasted and the stock was in active demand. Better reports were sent in from the motor car manufacturing centers where good accumulations of orders for January were reported. The 5½ per cent call loan rate was posted and there is little hope that the rate will come down until the first week in January.

Hudson was a leader in the motor group, advancing in active trading to a new high on the move at 49 5-8; Nash gained a point at 67 1-2, while Studebaker, General Motors and White Motors were fractionally higher. The move in the low priced rubber stocks gained some headway, Hough Ajax declined fractionally to 9½ on announcement of the proposed offering of new stock at 10.

Commodity markets were also dull and irregular, with cotton at a slightly higher price range and grain prices lower.

U. S. DRY FORCES RAID 58 NIGHT CLUBS AND CABARETS

YULE SEASON GAYETY HIT IN RUM CLEAN-UP

Seven Squads Co-operate in New York City Offensive.

PADLOCK DOORS

Agents Posing as "Butter and Egg Men," Get Evidence.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.— United States prohibition forces, on the very eve of the holiday season of gayety, struck their hardest blow against New York's night life early today.

Seven parties made up of assistant United States attorneys, policemen, federal prohibition agents and deputy United States marshals, all acting under direction of United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner, served personal injunctions and bills of complaint in padlock proceedings on 58 of the city's best known life clubs, cabarets and restaurants.

The raids followed an investigation of three months carried out by agents posing as "rich butter and egg men" and distinguished visitors from abroad. Directed by Major Chester P. Mills, of the prohibition enforcement branch, the agents ingratiated themselves by the lavish use of money and easily gained all the evidence they needed to start proceedings against many night clubs and cabarets in and on the fringe of the bright light district.

Well Known Clubs Visited.

Places visited included such well known clubs as Texas Guinan's 300 club, the Club Dover, Helen Morgan's Fifty-Fourth street club, the Cafe de Paris, Dinty Moore's club, the Club Anatole, the Palladium club, the Club Richman, Barney's, Del Fay club, Mort's restaurant, Texas Tommy Guinan's Playground, the Embassy club, the Club Biarritz and the Hawaiian club.

The raiders set out at 10 o'clock last night and at dawn today they were still busy. Prohibition officials described the offensive as "a complete success" and predicted that this would be the dryest Christmas and New Year's New York has known since prohibition went into effect.

It was declared that the bills of complaint would make the owners of the club liable to arrest if they attempted to disregard the padlock proceedings and start up in business again.

Crowds of men and women in evening dress who were dancing, dining and perhaps drinking in the fashionable night clubs, watched the proceedings. There were cries of anger and dismay as the revelry was halted in some of the places.

BESIDES, Balfour is still alive. How do we know the British will not send him to make us junk those new cruisers when half finished, as we junked a number of magnificent, half finished battleships, at Britain's request, some time ago?

THOSE that bought good stocks in time have a cheerful Christmas ahead, and have had part of it already. "Big Steel" cut a melon that means at least $225,000,000. And within a month assorted melons totaling $750,000,000 more are expected.

THIS country's income, about one hundred billions a year, is only the beginning of national prosperity. Such a country is really worth protecting, and with something better than hopes.

W. R. SCOTT, president of the Texas and Louisiana division of the Southern Pacific railroad, dropped dead yesterday, in Los Angeles. Heart disease, as usual.

Thousands of Americans, useful to their country, carefully have their automobile engines overhauled at regular intervals, and drive the engine in their own breasts until it stops, never to start again.

Plans to drag the Potomac river near Giesboro Point and the tidal basin have been abandoned temporarily because of ice floes.

Two Men are Held By Police Upon Girl's Complaint

Guy Richardson, Fourth street, and James McDowell, Third street, are being held in the city jail today upon charges of being suspicious persons as the result of information filed by a 13-year-old girl. They were arrested by Probation Officer John McShane.

Theft of Copper Wire Delays All Erie Road Trains

CLEVELAND, Dec. 22.—Thieves who stole nearly 50,000 feet of copper wire, connecting telegraph and signal systems, caused delay of several hours to all Erie railroad trains out of here today.

Interruptions to the wires caused signal lights to show danger signals, preventing the trains from moving.

3 a. m. The doctor there lanced my finger and gave me some sleeping pills. I went back home early in the morning of July 9th and went to bed."

"Did you ever know this man McDermott?"

"No."

"Did you ever see him in your store?"

"No."

Accounts for Night of Murder.

Then Rudner accounted for July 15th, the night of the murder, and for July 26th, the date the prosecution charges McDermott telephoned Rudner in Massillon from Akron and later visited Rudner to get "paid off."

Rudner testified he was away on an automobile ride to Brewster on July 26. He told of a visit on July 15th to Canton police headquarters to complain to S. A. Lengel, police chief, concerning some windows being broken in his store.

He drove to Massillon and "met a lady friend of mine," Rudner testified. "It was about 10:30 p. m., and we went to a party at Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fessler's. I stayed there until 12:30 midnight. Then with four others we drove from Canton to Akron to Massillon, picked up another young lady in Massillon and went back to Canton for something to eat in a restaurant."

When he got back to Massillon at about 4:30 a. m., the witness said he met Policeman J. W. Smith, who told him "a murder has been committed over in Canton."

"I drove right back to Canton and talked with the boys in police headquarters," Rudner said.

Former Policeman Testifies.

As Floyd Streitenberger, former Canton policeman, now iving in Fairfield, Ohio, resumed the witness stand today, Prosecutor McClintock attempted to cross-examine him regarding a purported newspaper interview in Buffalo, quoting him as saying he could furnish an alibi for Louis Mazer.

The court ruled out questions along these lines.

"Did Mazer have a gun when he visited you?"

"No," the witness answered.

Frank J. Hartman, lawyer, of Evansburg, Pa., who represented the McDermott family in the negotiations for the surrender of Pat was the next witness. He gave his testimony in a whisper to the court stenographer for the record, the judge not permitting the recital to be heard by the jury.

Kascholk's Wife on Stand.

Mrs. Steve Kascholk, wife of the state's star witness, then took the stand as a defense witness to impeach her husband's testimony. She said she had lived with Kascholk for three months in Nanty Glo, Pa., and said that he deserted her child.

"What did Steve do in Nanty Glo?"

"He didn't do anything."

"Have you ever seen Pat McDermott before?"

"No."

J. H. Stevens, another witness, testified that while in the workhouse he talked with Kascholk about the Mellett case.

"Steve said he didn't know anything about the murder but he was trying to get some dough out of it," the witness testified.

Kascholk furnished the state with incriminating testimony against McDermott, testifying that he and McDermott looked over the Mellett home but that he (Kascholk) was afraid of the "job" and left town.

Prosecution Charges "Frame-up."

The spirit of Christmastide is obviously lacking in the attitude of opposing counsel. Defense counsel had charged in open court that the prosecution is attempting "to frame McDermott in order to satisfy the public hue and cry and because of political ambitions."

The defense entered on the record the allegations that the prosecution promised McDermott he would "be turned out on the bricks" if he would surrender and tell all he knew; that they "didn't care about anything but 'getting Rudner,'" and that McDermott after he surrendered declared he "had nothing to confess."

Prosecutor C. B. McClintock denied he made any trade with the defendant or his relatives other than to promise him "a square deal."

Speaker Denies Charge

penny on that or any other game and was entirely ignorant of any bets being made until, as I said before, in June. It seems strange the powers-that-be of baseball should take the work of a man of Leonard's calibre when my name does not appear in the case.

"I have been told when Leonard was waived out of the American League that he made the statement that I was a fine kind of a friend to have and that he would 'get me.' I must say he took a fine way to make good on his threat. He should have taken into consideration that I was only the manager, not the owner of a ball club, and that I had an obligation to my employer, the late James C. Dunn, to protect his interests by not adding a man to the club roster whom I knew in my heart had run his race as a major league pitcher.

Trying Ordeal, Says Tris.

"It has been a terrible strain and trying ordeal for me but there is real satisfaction in knowing that my name is not connected with the case in any manner except by word of mouth of a veritable Judas. I feel confident the day will come when Leonard, if he has a spark of manhood in him, will agree to appear before Landis and clear my name. I am absolutely guiltless.

"In conclusion I want to say that the testimony together with the explanation given by both Wood and Cobb proves there was no thought of wrong-doing on the part of either man. And there is absolutely nothing to show the ball game was fixed."

BALTIMORE, Dec. 22.—Elmer G. Myers, the losing pitcher in the now famous game between Detroit and Cleveland, played on September 25, 1919, declared today that it was only an ordinary game to him, and that if it was "fixed" he knew nothing about it.

"Speaker never gave me any instructions as to how to pitch that game," said Myers. "I pitched to win."

The Tigers pounded Myers for 18 hits and won the game, 9 to 5. Myers, who makes his home here and last season was a member of the Orioles, also declared he knew nothing of any betting on the game.

Winning Pitcher's Statement.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 22.—Bernie Boland, who pitched the fateful game of Sept. 25, 1919, for the Detroit Tigers and who now is a cement contractor in this city, having given up baseball several years ago, today declared that he knew nothing out of the way in the game in question.

Asked if he were aware that the game was "thrown," Bernie said:

"So far as I know everything was O. K. on this game. I was given the pitching assignment in a regular way and went out to win it. The statement of Landis was the first I ever heard of anything crooked connected with the game.

"I have not been questioned by anyone regarding the game and it's hard to believe that Cobb was a party to anything of this sort."

Ban Johnson's Statement.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—"The American league always has been able to lay a heavy hand upon those in its ranks who do not behave."

This was the opening shot in a statement issued today by B. B. Johnson, president of the American league concerning the diamond's new baseball scandal.

Johnson is credited in some quarters with instigating the entire investigation which involved Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker.

The American league boss expressed sympathy for Speaker's 82-year-old mother.

"I am saddened to think she will be forced to bear the thought of this to her grave," he said. "Ty Cobb has a large family. Joe Wood has two boys in school in the east. It is too bad that these innocent persons must bear the brunt of the scandal."

Johnson said he "regretted" the occurence more than he could "express."

TWO DEAD AS KENTUCKY IS HIT BY FLOOD

Lowlands Along Two Rivers are Completely Under Water.

BOAT CAPSIZES

No Danger Along Ohio Valley, Says Observer.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 22.— Two were dead today in the van of one of the most disastrous floods in the history of the lowlands along the Kentucky and Cumberland rivers.

A. D. Howard, merchant, and Calvin Goings, farmer, were drowned when the boat in which they and Herschel Goings and Huston Cuzick were crossing the Kentucky river capsized against driftwood.

Lowlands in seven counties are completely under water and two counties are cut off from the outside world, as a result of the heavy rains of the past several days.

Water near Corbin was four feet above the highway and travel was at a standstill. Many Corbin families were forced to flee from their homes.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 22.—Although rivers in Kentucky, West Virginia and Tennessee are expected to pass the flood stage by tonight, the Ohio River wil be able to absorb the overflow without serious flood menace to the Ohio valley in general, U. S. Weather Observer W. C. Deveraux said today in quieting current rumors that a serious flood was in view.

The Ohio river is expected to reach a stage of 18 or 20 feet in East Liverpool early Friday, according to employes at U. S. dam No. 8. The river was reported to be rising at noon today when the 11-foot mark was registered. No flood stage is expected here.

Speed Scaccuto Trial

men. He testified he retired about 2:15 a. m., and that he heard reports from guns and that as he looked at the clock he heard other shots. Then he got up and went down the street. He then came back and called the fire station. He testified that he went to the Maggio house and saw the body of Patrolman Kenney lying in the front yard between the walk and the fence near a flower pot. He also said he saw the tracks of women's shoes on the ground.

Under cross examination by Attorney George T. Farrell, Morgan testified he heard 10 or 12 shots, five of which were in quick succession. Farrell then asked the witness to tap on the witness box about how fast these shots were fired and the witness did as directed.

He went on to relate that he had seen the Carbicella automobile many times before.

Frank Fusco's Testimony.

Frank Fusco, under direct examination by Prosecutor Brookes, testified he lived in 13th street, that he was home the night Patrolman Kenney was shot, that Scaccuto formerly boarded with them and that he had known Nick for several years.

At this point of the testimony Bennie Pepe, who was sitting at the defense counsel table, was sworn as an interpreter by Judge Thomas and quetions and answers were given the jury through him. Fusco, continuing, said that he was in bed when Scaccuto called him, that Nick got into their house by breaking a window and that Scaccuto was in bed when he first saw him.

Fusco testified that when he began to talk to Scaccuto, the defendant told him to let him sleep and he did not say how he was wounded. Fusco said Nick told him he would pay for the window he broke. Fusco said he did not hear any shots.

When cross examined by Attorney James E. O'Grady, Fusco testified that Scaccuto had boarded with them for about three months but this was five or six months before Kenney was shot.

Fred L. Herline is Witness.

Fred L. Herline, under direct examination by Assistant Prosecutor Bauknecht, testified he was standing in front of the Wellsville city hall the night Kenney was killed and that he had heard a number of shots. He said that he and Oyster went down Main street toward Thirteenth and that they met a car between Ninth and Tenth streets, finished in dull red and having disk wheels. He said that Rocco Carbicella was in the front seat. The witness also said he visited the murder scene and described conditions in the front yard where the body was found. Kenney was lying on his left side with his face on the ground, he testified.

He said he found a .38 caliber bullet near a flower vase which had been upset and that Sheriff Wright found a chip off another bullet. He testified that the ground looked as if there had been some scuffling. He also said he found a guitar in the yard, near the east fence.

The witness, cross-examined by Attorney Moore, testified that he went to the Maggio home alone and told of the crowds gathering about the front yard.

Mrs. Wilda McIntyre, under direct examination by Prosecutor Brookes, testified that she had walked over to the Maggio home after the shooting and that she saw Kenney lying on the ground and that she heard him draw two or three breaths. She said she was there when Patrolman Barnes arrived and that there was no one there when she reached the scene.

The witness was not cross examined.

Edward Pugh Questioned.

Edward Pugh was examined by Prosecutor Brookes. He said he was on duty at Fifth and Main streets when the shooting occurred and that he had called Oyster and Herline to find where the shots came from. He testified he saw Carbicella drive up Main street in his own car and when the witness went to the Maggio home shortly before 3 o'clock the body of Kenney was still in the yard.

Pugh swore that a revolver (state's exhibit No. 3) a .38 caliber weapon, was found in Kenney's hand when he arrived at the Maggio home. He said he didn't examine it. He testified Mayor Fogo took the revolver out of Kenney's hand but the witness did not examine the revolver.

Soon after he arrived at the Maggio home, the witness said, they brought in a couple of stills from houses between Eleventh and Twelfth street in Commerce.

He said he was in Fusco's home when they had finished dressing Scaccuto's wounds.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Farrell, Pugh said he was at the Fusco home about an hour.

Traced Drops of Blood.

Thomas Madden, 1017 Center street, in direct examination by Bauknecht, testified of being at the Fusco home with the mayor and policemen and that they traced drops of blood into the Fusco yard and saw a broken window.

The witness testified they went upstairs and saw Scaccuto in bed with one foot lying over another and that his leg was bandaged.

Madden testified that the defendant, when he saw him in the Fusco home, looked like a colored man, but that the nurses cleaned him up at the hospital.

Mayor Fogo, when examined by Prosecutor Brookes, testified that Officer Barnes came to his home at 2:30 o'clock the morning of May 17. Fogo said he went to the Maggio home and saw the body of Patrolman Kenney lying between a flower vase and a fence. He said Kenney had a uniform on, that he turned the body over, and took a revolver from the patrolman's hand. The witness identified the revolver.

He said that all the shells in the gun had been exploded.

A pair of blue trousers, worn by Kenney the night he was killed, was then shown the witness. The bullet holes in the cloth and the blood stains were identified as those observed after Kenney had been disrobed.

Mayor Fogo also said that he had visited the Fusco home, saw Scaccuto in bed with his leg bandaged, and a pair of scissors lying on the bed near him. The wounds, the witness said, were in the left leg.

Fogo testified that he said "Hello, Nick, how did this happen?" and that Scaccuto replied, "I was walking on the street and someone shot."

The witness said the defendant could not talk good.

The efficiency of Patrolman Kenney was praised by the witness.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Moore, the mayor testified there was dark and light lint on the fence near where the body of Kenney was found.

Acting Chief's Story.

Arthur Newton, acting chief of police, was examined by Prosecutor Brookes. He told of the time of death of Kenney and of going to the Maggio home shortly afterwards and that later he went to the Fusco home when he placed Scaccuto under arrest. Officer Barnes went to the Fusco home with him. He testified he saw Scaccuto in bed and that after he had examined him he had placed him under arrest. Newton testified that Scaccuto said to him, "I got shot on the street," and that the defendant "didn't say anything else" to him at the house. He said Dr. McCulloch dressed the wound and that when Newton asked Scaccuto why he didn't report the shooting that Scaccuto refused to answer him.

State exhibits 6 and 7 were identified by the witness as bullets found near the place.

Newton testified that Scaccuto had been around the Carbicella store, and that Scaccuto told him he was running the store. He also told of locating the Carbicella car in the garage of his father-in-law. He also said that Scaccuto has been arrested for violating the liquor law and that the charge against him was dismissed by Mayor Fogo for lack of evidence.

Charles Montgomery said he was in the East Liverpool hospital when J. H. Fultz asked Scaccuto "which way he ran when he shot Kenney," and that Scaccuto said, "Up the street."

Under cross-examination by Attorney Moore, Montgomery said that Fultz asked him to go to the hospital with him and that while in the emergency room Scaccuto seemed to be suffering and talked in broken language.

A 15-hour search for Doris Mountford, 8, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mountford, 1009 Riverview street, ended shortly after 8 o'clock this morning when the child was found by her father on Bank street.

When the girl who attends the McKinley school failed to return to her home last evening, her father combed the hillside in the vicinity of Beechwood and the Northside.

She said that she had stayed in a Northside store until the proprietor closed the place last evening and spent the remainder of the night on the front porch of a McKinnon avenue residence, fearing to return home.

Mountford located the child as she was on her way to school.

BANKER FOILS HOLD-UP MAN

Frustrates Columbus Robbery Attempt by Quick Thinking.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 22.—Teller J. J. Brown, of the City National bank, today frustrated a bandit's attempt to rob him of $1,000 by thinking an instant faster than the man behind the gun.

While scores of clerks and customers hurried about the unmasked man approached Brown's cage and passed the teller a note. Under his arm he carried a folded newspaper.

'Hand me $1,000 in big bills, I shoot straight O. K.." read the greasy folded paper.

Brown looked up and into the shining muzzle of a gun.

"I'll have to get it for you," countered Brown, sparring for time.

"Don't stall, Buddy," snarled the young robber. "I'll count three before I shoot."

The bandit opened his lips to count when Brown dropped beneath the marble counter of his cage, and yelled for help, frightening the gunman who fled, brandishing his weapon.

Christmas shoppers made way for the man as he fled into an alley.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKETS

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—With the exception of the motor stocks and a few of the specialties, prices of active stocks were slightly lower in early trading today. The market was still under the influence of profit taking and professional selling, based on the tigher money situation and the prospect of a withdrawal of outside traders over the holidays.

A few additions were made to the list of corporations revising their dividends upward. Julius Kayser went on a $4 dividend basis as forecasted and the stock was in active demand. Better reports were sent in from the motor car manufacturing centers where good accumulations of orders for January were reported. The 5½ per cent call loan rate was posted and there is little hope that the rate will come down until the first week in January.

Hudson was a leader in the motor group, advancing in active trading to a new high on the move at 49 5-8; Nash gained a point at 67 1-2, while Studebaker, General Motors and White Motors were fractionally higher. The move in the low priced rubber stocks gained some headway, Hough Ajax declined fractionally to 9½ on announcement of the proposed offering of new stock at 10.

Commodity markets were also dull and irregular, with cotton at a slightly higher price range and grain prices lower.

Harry Heilmann Responsible For Expose of "Thrown" Game

Compelled Leonard To Tell His Story To Detroit Owner

Latest Angle in Baseball Scandal Revealed by John McGraw in Proof of His Belief That Game is Honest; Tiger Star Makes Leonard Tell Whole Thing to Frank Navin.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Harry Heilmann, who is not a league executive, under oath to preserve honesty, nor a $65,000 commissioner who is committed to the same purpose nor yet a disgruntled conspirator but just a man in the rank trying to conduct himself in a manner consistent with his honor, is the individual who forced baseball's latest scandal to a showdown.

John J. McGraw vouchsafed this information to the writer today in proof of his sincere belief that the game was and is fundamental honest. McGraw would allow no other construction to be placed upon baseball's position, in spite of the sensational disclosures involving Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, hallowed idols of young America, and Joe Wood, and "Dutch" Leonard, first class pitchers in their day.

It was Leonard's confession that brought the expose into the light today but behind that confession is the story of a man who held honor and the good name of his profession above friendship. The man who took his unassailable position in the face of the tragic consequences he knew must be suffered by two of baseball's great stars was Harry Heilmann, according to McGraw's statement.

The story, as McGraw tells it, runs something like this:

Leonard, either in a spirit of bravado or beset by the qualms of conscience, confided in Heilmann the details of the conspiracy hereby the players named were to clean up on the game of September 25, 1919.

"All right," said Heilmann very earnestly. "Now, I'll tell you one. You are to bring that story before Frank Navin not later than 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. I'd advise you to do this because I will be there at 10:10 and what he doesn't know by that time, he will know in five minutes."

Leonard, it seems, took the hint. It also would seem that he took $20,000 for his trouble but neither McGraw nor baseball in general in concerned with that.

What McGraw, who has seen his own men "go wrong" not once but several times, would like to emphasize, is that baseball is proving its honesty by exposing its conspirators as fast as they bob up, regardless of their importance.

"Even the finest garden must have its occasional weed," is the way McGraw sizes up the situation.

"But a good gardener will rout out the weeds as fast as they push their heads into the open and that is exactly what baseball is doing."

"But first you must have proof that they are actually weeds. I sat on my own bench and writhed in mental agony as I watched Zimmerman and Chase do things that I knew were wrong. But I lacked proof of their dishonesty and both my hands and tongue were tied.

"I couldn't have shouted mere suspicions from the house tops, could I? If I did, they would have had me in court on libel proceedings and probably they would have collected, too. But as soon as we had definite proof, we acted.

"The Dolan-O'Connell case was just a deplorable faux pas by a couple of men who didn't know any better.

"It may be a bromide but I wish to state my sincere conviction that these exposes prove baseball to be really honest. No man is big enough to be whitewashed and no man will be.

"This looks bad now but don't forget it happened back before the White Sox scandal and before the Dolan-O'Connell business. The fearless way in which we prosecuted these cases leaves no doubt at this time as to the fate that awaits men who stray off the reservation. Before 1919, scandals were unknown. Today, every ball player in the land realizes just where a misstep will carry him. I think you have witnessed your last baseball conspiracy."

Fast Work.

Football Annual Covers Eastern Ohio Athletics

The football annual is making its first appearance. If possible, it will be a yearly post-season feature, according to Robert Garrison, of Salem, the managing editor.

MAY ASK COURT TO STOP TRADE

Stockholder Hints Legal Action in Hornsby Deal.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 22.—Suggestion that legal action may be taken in an effort to block consummation of the deal which sends Rogers Hornsby to the New York Giants, was seen here today in a statement made by Mark C. Steinberg, a member of the St. Louis Cardinals' board of directors. The trade was made by Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis National league club.

"Breadon did not consult the stockholders or board of directors when he put through this deal," Steinberg declared, "and in trading Hornsby, who is second largest stockholder of the club, Breadon has deprived the Cardinals of one of their principal assets.

"This naturally depreciates the value of stock in the club.

"Hornsby's lawyer is going to look up some points to find out whether or not Breadon, under the club's charter, has the right to transact business in this fashion. It may be possible to have the deal declared off through legal action. This of course we doubt, but there may be some lively action stirring around here yet."

President Breadon, however, seemed not in the least disturbed. He said:

"I expected to be criticized by some. But those who have criticized most might be a bit surprised to learn that I have been besieged all day with telephone calls, congratulating me on my judgment in parting with Hornsby for Frisch and Ring. I am not at all sorry I made the move."

"I'm a member of the Giants and I don't see where things can be altered," the former Cardinal leader said. "If I can reach an agreement with Breadon, I'll arrange to get rid of my stock in the club."

(Hornsby is the second largest stockholder in the Cardinals, owning 1,167 shares for which he paid slightly more than $50,000.)

Breadon, likewise, said the matter was settled beyond all recall; that the papers had been signed and were passing through the mails to and from New York.

"The deal was made with Charles Stoneham, president of the Giants, Monday night and it was a straight business transaction," Breadon said. "There was no chance to come to terms with Hornsby. There is no undoing of my transaction."

Champion at 56.

Pool in a Pool.

A new indoor sport has been introduced in Hollywood's film colony, in which pool is played in a pool, the balls being made of a substance that floats. Nets are placed at the corners and the players are clothed in swimming suits.

He Is "Traded" Only to Remain With Old Team

Bill Terry, versatile Giant infielder, is to be traded again, it is said. Terry is the most traded ball player in baseball. He is constantly on the market mainly because he's a utility man, but usually finds himself in the Giant lineup when the trade winds die.

"Can't Two Birds Meet Without Pulling Trade?" Queries This Pair

Central Press Photo

If you're a baseball man you can't even ask another baseball man for a light these days without being interviewed on the matter of possible trades. For with seven new big league pilots out to shape their clubs this is the busiest stove league session in years. Here we have Walter McNicols, secretary and business manager of the Cleveland Indians and President Barnard's chief aide (at left), halted during a chat with Miller Huggins, Yankee manager, right, to deny they are about to trade Babe Ruth and a few other Yanks for George Uhle, Joe Sewell and a half dozen other Indians or what have you.

Maloney-Persson To Clash in Heavy Elimination Bout

By George Barry.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Another so-called logical contender will be eliminated tonight at Madison Square Garden as a result of the ten round bout between Jimmy Maloney, of Boston, and Harry Persson, champion of Sweden, in the second of two heavyweight shows held this week for the benefit of the local Christmas fund. A bout between the winner and Jack Delaney, who knocked out Bud Gorman on Monday, is a possibility.

Maloney generally was favored today as the winner, largely because of his sensational knockout of Arthur De Kuh and Persson's recent defeat by Pat McCarthy. However, the Swede was a hot tip to win in some quarters and the short-enders were taking all they could get on Persson at 5 to 8.

The ten round distance was regarded as favorable to both of the principals because of their tendency to blow up during the latter stages of their fights. There was little betting on the prospect of a knockout and what there was favored Maloney.

With Good Name of Baseball At Stake Landis Tosses Bomb

Name and Fame of Speaker and Cobb Not Great Enough to Save Them When Commissioner Thought Pitiless Publicity Necessary.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—"The good name of baseball was at stake." And so Kenesaw M. Landis, high commissioner, was willing to light and toss the bomb which has rocked the game with its third great scandal and blotted the escutcheon of four of its one-time famous players, two of them among the greatest figures that ever pranced upon a diamond.

The name and fame of Tyrus Raymond Cobb and Tristram Speaker were not great enough to save them when he thought that the good of the game demanded pitiless publicity for them because the finger of suspicion had pointed toward them.

In the eyes of Kenesaw M. Landis, anything is justified that will keep the name of baseball clean.

"His Hardest Job."

"By George, that was the hardest job I ever faced," he said, referring to the hundred pages of typewritten testimony which he made public late yesterday, "but the good name of baseball was at stake and I thought I owed it to the public to give it the facts."

Those few words constitute the sole break in the sphinx-like silence in which he withdrew himself after clothing with facts the skeleton rumors that have been tossed around in virtually all baseball circles since Cobb and Speaker suddenly resigned their managerships at Detroit and Cleveland this fall on excuses that, if they were not lame, at least limped.

Only Excuses.

Those excuses—that Cobb was tired of the game in which he shone for a score of years and that Speaker's legs had gone back on him—are now shown just that—excuses. It is shown that their resignations were turned in just when the investigation which culminated in the present expose was at it's height.

Whether the squire, as Landis is somewhat affectionately known, believes that a comparatively unimportant game between Cleveland and Detroit in the latter city on September 14, 1919, was won by Cobb, Speaker, Hubert "Dutch" Leonard and "Smoky Joe" Wood under the grand stand before hostilities began on the field, the commissioner refuses to say.

Neither will he say whether he believes that Speaker and Cobb won and wagered upon the game, in which both took part.

Nor does he comment upon Wood's admission that he had Leonard and "a friend of mine not connected with baseball" wager $600 upon the game and took down $420 profit.

Was "Sore" at Cobb.

"It's all in there," he insists, jabbing one lean forefinger at the hundred pages of testimony. "Read their testimony and judge for yourself whether they are innocent or guilty."

"What do you think was Leonard's motive in turning up those letters after saving them all these years?" he was asked.

Landis' eyes twinkled. "I gather he didn't care much for Cobb," he replied laconically.

Now that the first shock of finding two of its greatest idols besmirched is over and that a scrutiny of the evidence neither convicts nor acquits them, several million fans probably are wondering what all the shooting is about.

Ban Johnson Stunned.

Even Ban B. Johnson, president of the American league in which further sordid doings in 1919 are disclosed, was considerably stunned by Landis' action in giving out everything.

"I am dumbfounded. I won't talk about it," he said.

Which seemed to throw cold water on the belief that his recent burying of the hatchet with Landis at the recent joint meeting of the American and National leagues here was for the purpose of presenting a united front when the bomb went off.

Out of the torrent of testimony which poured out of the squire's office yesterday the sequence of events which led to the expose was being picked out today.

Rankled Under "Injustice."

Apparently it would never have come out if, last year, Cobb, having procured Leonard's reinstatement and signed him for Detroit, had not fired him toward the end of last season and waived him out of the big leagues.

Rankling under what his testimony says he believed injustice because he was compelled to pitch out of turn and without proper rest, Leonard sought to force an adjustment of money difficulties with the Detroit club by producing two letters.

One was a letter from Cobb to him which veiled references to "business transactions" and sums of money referring to a bet upon that long since played Cleveland-Detroit game, Leonard said.

The other was a letter from Wood to Leonard in which no ambiguity was attempted and a frank discussion of what money had been wagered and won by the two of them was penned.

Goes To See Leonard.

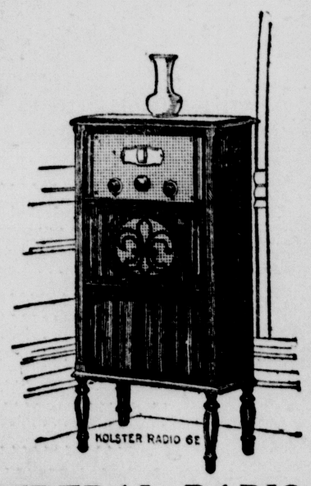

The Detroit club, Landis says, then informed the executive committee of the American league what Leonard was charging. Soon the letters were in possession of the league. Leonard

Harry Heilmann Responsible For Expose of "Thrown" Game

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Harry Heilmann, who is not a league executive, under oath to preserve honesty, nor a $65,000 commissioner who is committed to the same purpose nor yet a disgruntled conspirator but just a man in the rank trying to conduct himself in a manner consistent with his honor, is the individual who forced baseball's latest scandal to a showdown.

John J. McGraw vouchsafed this information to the writer today in proof of his sincere belief that the game was and is fundamental honest. McGraw would allow no other construction to be placed upon baseball's position, in spite of the sensational disclosures involving Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, hallowed idols of young America, and Joe Wood, and "Dutch" Leonard, first class pitchers in their day.

It was Leonard's confession that brought the expose into the light today but behind that confession is the story of a man who held honor and the good name of his profession above friendship. The man who took his unassailable position in the face of the tragic consequences he knew must be suffered by two of baseball's great stars was Harry Heilmann, according to McGraw's statement.

The story, as McGraw tells it, runs something like this:

Leonard, either in a spirit of bravado or beset by the qualms of conscience, confided in Heilmann the details of the conspiracy hereby the players named were to clean up on the game of September 25, 1919.

"All right," said Heilmann very earnestly. "Now, I'll tell you one. You are to bring that story before Frank Navin not later than 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. I'd advise you to do this because I will be there at 10:10 and what he doesn't know by that time, he will know in five minutes."

Leonard, it seems, took the hint. It also would seem that he took $20,000 for his trouble but neither McGraw nor baseball in general in concerned with that.

What McGraw, who has seen his own men "go wrong" not once but several times, would like to emphasize, is that baseball is proving its honesty by exposing its conspirators as fast as they bob up, regardless of their importance.

"Even the finest garden must have its occasional weed," is the way McGraw sizes up the situation.

"But a good gardener will rout out the weeds as fast as they push their heads into the open and that is exactly what baseball is doing."

"But first you must have proof that they are actually weeds. I sat on my own bench and writhed in mental agony as I watched Zimmerman and Chase do things that I knew were wrong. But I lacked proof of their dishonesty and both my hands and tongue were tied.

"I couldn't have shouted mere suspicions from the house tops, could I? If I did, they would have had me in court on libel proceedings and probably they would have collected, too. But as soon as we had definite proof, we acted.

"The Dolan-O'Connell case was just a deplorable faux pas by a couple of men who didn't know any better.

"It may be a bromide but I wish to state my sincere conviction that these exposes prove baseball to be really honest. No man is big enough to be whitewashed and no man will be.

"This looks bad now but don't forget it happened back before the White Sox scandal and before the Dolan-O'Connell business. The fearless way in which we prosecuted these cases leaves no doubt at this time as to the fate that awaits men who stray off the reservation. Before 1919, scandals were unknown. Today, every ball player in the land realizes just where a misstep will carry him. I think you have witnessed your last baseball conspiracy."

Football Annual Covers Eastern Ohio Athletics

"The Intersectional Football Annual of 1926," an attractively made record of scholastic football in eastern Ohio, mazagine size, published by the Salem Hi-Y club, is being distributed here through the East Liverpool Hi-Y club and elsewhere in sections that have been "covered" by the sponsors.

The football annual is making its first appearance. If possible, it will be a yearly post-season feature, according to Robert Garrison, of Salem, the managing editor.

The annual contains articles on scholastic football by coaches of this county, Struthers, Alliance and other football centers, as well as football discussions by county sporting writers and others interested in the welfare of school athletics.

Dick Larkins, of the local Hi-Y organization, is in charge of the distribution here.

MAY ASK COURT TO STOP TRADE

Stockholder Hints Legal Action in Hornsby Deal.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 22.—Suggestion that legal action may be taken in an effort to block consummation of the deal which sends Rogers Hornsby to the New York Giants, was seen here today in a statement made by Mark C. Steinberg, a member of the St. Louis Cardinals' board of directors. The trade was made by Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis National league club.

"Breadon did not consult the stockholders or board of directors when he put through this deal," Steinberg declared, "and in trading Hornsby, who is second largest stockholder of the club, Breadon has deprived the Cardinals of one of their principal assets.

"This naturally depreciates the value of stock in the club.

"Hornsby's lawyer is going to look up some points to find out whether or not Breadon, under the club's charter, has the right to transact business in this fashion. It may be possible to have the deal declared off through legal action. This of course we doubt, but there may be some lively action stirring around here yet."

President Breadon, however, seemed not in the least disturbed. He said: "I expected to be criticized by some. But those who have criticized most might be a bit surprised to learn that I have been besieged all day with telephone calls, congratulating me on my judgment in parting with Hornsby for Frisch and Ring. I am not at all sorry I made the move."

"I'm a member of the Giants and I don't see where things can be altered," the former Cardinal leader said. "If I can reach an agreement with Breadon, I'll arrange to get rid of my stock in the club."

(Hornsby is the second largest stockholder in the Cardinals, owning 1,167 shares for which he paid slightly more than $50,000.)

Breadon, likewise, said the matter was settled beyond all recall: that the papers had been signed and were passing through the mails to and from New York.

"The deal was made with Charles Stoneham, president of the Giants, Monday night and it was a straight business transaction," Breadon said. "There was no chance to come to terms with Hornsby. There is no undoing of my transaction."

He Is "Traded" Only to Remain With Old Team

Bill Terry, versatile Giant infielder, is to be traded again, it is said. Terry is the most traded ball player in baseball. He is constantly on the market mainly because he's a utility man, but usually finds himself in the Giant lineup when the trade winds die.

Maloney-Persson To Clash in Heavy Elimination Bout

By George Barry.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Another so-called logical contender will be eliminated tonight at Madison Square Garden as a result of the ten round bout between Jimmy Maloney, of Boston, and Harry Persson, champion of Sweden, in the second of two heavyweight shows held this week for the benefit of the local Christmas fund. A bout between the winner and Jack Delaney, who knocked out Bud Gorman on Monday, is a possibility.

Maloney generally was favored today as the winner, largely because of his sensational knockout of Arthur De Kuh and Persson's recent defeat by Pat McCarthy. However, the Swede was a hot tip to win in some quarters and the short-enders were taking all they could get on Persson at 5 to 8.

The ten round distance was regarded as favorable to both of the principals because of their tendency to blow up during the latter stages of their fights. There was little betting on the prospect of a knockout and what there was favored Maloney.

With Good Name of Baseball At Stake Landis Tosses Bomb

Name and Fame of Speaker and Cobb Not Great Enough to Save Them When Commissioner Thought Pitiless Publicity Necessary.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—"The good name of baseball was at stake." And so Kenesaw M. Landis, high commissioner, was willing to light and toss the bomb which has rocked the game with its third great scandal and blotted the escutcheon of four of its one-time famous players, two of them among the greatest figures that ever pranced upon a diamond.

The name and fame of Tyrus Raymond Cobb and Tristram Speaker were not great enough to save them when he thought that the good of the game demanded pitiless publicity for them because the finger of suspicion had pointed toward them.

In the eyes of Kenesaw M. Landis, anything is justified that will keep the name of baseball clean.

"His Hardest Job."

"By George, that was the hardest job I ever faced," he said, referring to the hundred pages of typewritten testimony which he made public late yesterday, "but the good name of baseball was at stake and I thought I owed it to the public to give it the facts."

Those few words constitute the sole break in the sphinx-like silence in which he withdrew himself after clothing with facts the skeleton rumors that have been tossed around in virtually all baseball circles since Cobb and Speaker suddenly resigned their managerships at Detroit and Cleveland this fall on excuses that, if they were not lame, at least limped.

Only Excuses.

Those excuses—that Cobb was tired of the game in which he shone for a score of years and that Speaker's legs had gone back on him—are now shown just that—excuses. It is shown that their resignations were turned in just when the investigation which culminated in the present expose was at it's height.

Ohioan is Blinded By Acid; Estranged Wife is Arrested

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 22—Carl Gratziano was in Grant hospital today, with the sight of one of his eyes probably destroyed, physicians said, while his wife, Mrs. Laura Gratziano, 27, was held by police. The woman, it is alleged threw acid in her husband's face at the latter's home here. They had been separated several months. Mrs. Gratziano carried her year-old baby in her arms as she went to her husband's home and threw the acid upon him.

1926 taxes became a lien April 11, 1926, the day preceding the second Monday in April.

First half must be paid not later than December 20th, 1926. Last Half must be paid not later than June 20th, 1927.

The correct way to pay a year's tax without penalty is to pay in December for December and the following June.

Penalty on delinquent Real Estate and Personal Property is 10 per cent.

When writing for a statement of your taxes, remember property appears on the Treasurer's books in the name of the person having title on April 11th, 1926 and that the law requires the Treasurer's books and receipts to be made out in the name of the party owning property when the lien took effect.

In writing for statement of taxes, always send last receipt, or give name of owner in April 1926, stating plainly in what city, town or township located, and whether real or personal property.

When you write for statement or pay by mail, enclose a self addressed stamped envelope for reply.

Examine your receipts and see that they are correct before you leave the Treasurer's Office.

Treasurer's Office will be open from 7 A. M. to 5:00 P. M.

With Good Name

is said to have received $20,000 for them. On September 6, last, they were passed to Landis.

Efforts by the squire to get Leonard to come to Chicago were futile. The former southpaw pitcher made excuses, such as that he was afraid to come to Chicago because "quite often they bump a guy off there." So Landis packed up and went to California, got hold of Leonard and from him obtained the story that he had conspired with Cobb, Speaker and Wood for Detroit to win that ball game in 1919 and that the four of them had wagered upon it and won when Detroit came out on the long end of a 9 to 5 score.

Others Called In.

Then Cobb, Speaker and Wood were called to Chicago, Wood admitted his part in the betting but denied any plot to have the game thrown to Detroit or that Cobb or Speaker were involved in the wagering. The others denied everything except that Cobb admitted that, at Leonard's request, he had asked Wood how much money he had got down and at what odds.

That's all there is to the evidence except that a man named West, employed around the Detroit park, admitted he had placed a bet for Wood and later collected the winnings and turned them over to him.

It's enough, though, the squire insisted, to warrant publicity because "the good name of baseball was at stake."

Today the squire had retired into silence again and the actors in the drama had quit Chicago.

Cobb was speeding back to his Georgia home after an impassioned and at times tearful defense of himself and Speaker.

"We're going out of the game absolutely clean," he declared. "We don't deserve what's been handed us."

Speaker Denies Betting.

His anger seemed particularly directed against President Frank Navin of the Detroit club who, he said, deserted and went back on him without waiting to learn if he could disprove the charges.

Speaker, back in Cleveland, was hotly denying he had bet on "that damned game" and telling what he thought of Leonard, whose grudge against him appeared to be founded on the fact that Speaker d'd not claim him for Cleveland when Cobb asked waivers.

Wood was headed back east, having disappeared as soon as he had made his confession that he had wagered on the game and attempted to defend it on the grounds that all the players in the leagues made a practice of wagering on their own teams.

Leonard, still in California, was quoted as gloatingly declaring he was even with Cobb and Speaker, but sorry he had been compelled to drag Wood into it.

Haskin's Letter

as long as there are enough staff offices to serve the combatant branch and maintain an efficient peace-time operation, the output of the Naval Academy shall be diverted to the line, where it is considered the training will give the greatest return in preparedness.

Although authority is given for the appointment to the academy of a hundred men from the enlisted personnel each year, there were only eighty-four in the entering class this year and ninety-four last year. It is hoped that in 1927 the full quota may be obtained.

A drive has also been made to give as much publicity as possible to the law of June 8, 1926, which authorizes the appointment of forty additional midshipmen at large. These are to be appointed by the president from among the sons of officers, soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps who were killed in action, or died prior to July 2, 1921, of wounds received or diseases contracted in line of duty during the World War.

A further provision of this law is that half of these appointments shall be made from among the sons of officers and the other half from those of warrant officers and enlisted personnel. If the full authorized quota of this group can be attained, it will aid in bringing the number of new officers up to the necessary requirements.

The passage of the bill providing for a five-year building program for naval aviation has increased the problem of specially trained aviation personnel. There has been this shortage for several years, since naval aviation is primarily a war-time development, and consequently nearly all of the Navel Reserve aviators who had entered the service in 1917 and 1918 were lost to the service after the war. One of the methods the department has taken to combat this shortage of aviation personnel has been to introduce a course of flight training for all midshipmen at the academy. This serves to give them basic training in aviation and makes it possible to sift out the best aviation material in each class for future training at Pensacola at decreased expense to the government.

The Navy Department feels that it was difficult enough to keep apace with officers requirements without having added the problem of meeting the situation with a reduced number of congressional appointments.

Regardless of military dress restrictions the Army and Navy will have to be content with a tie until next fall.—Martins Ferry Times.

is said to have received $20,000 for them. On September 6, last, they were passed to Landis.

Efforts by the squire to get Leonard to come to Chicago were futile. The former southpaw pitcher made excuses, such as that he was afraid to come to Chicago because "quite often they bump a guy off there." So Landis packed up and went to California, got hold of Leonard and from him obtained the story that he had conspired with Cobb, Speaker and Wood for Detroit to win that ball game in 1919 and that the four of them had wagered upon it and won when Detroit came out on the long end of a 9 to 5 score.

Others Called In.

Then Cobb, Speaker and Wood were called to Chicago, Wood admitted his part in the betting but denied any plot to have the game thrown to Detroit or that Cobb or Speaker were involved in the wagering. The others denied everything except that Cobb admitted that, at Leonard's request, he had asked Wood how much money he had got down and at what odds.

That's all there is to the evidence except that a man named West, employed around the Detroit park, admitted he had placed a bet for Wood and later collected the winnings and turned them over to him.

It's enough, though, the squire insisted, to warrant publicity because "the good name of baseball was at stake."

Today the squire had retired into silence again and the actors in the drama had quit Chicago.

Cobb was speeding back to his Georgia home after an impassioned and at times tearful defense of himself and Speaker.

"We're going out of the game absolutely clean," he declared. "We don't deserve what's been handed us."

Speaker Denies Betting.

His anger seemed particularly directed against President Frank Navin of the Detroit club who, he said, deserted and went back on him without waiting to learn if he could disprove the charges.

Speaker, back in Cleveland, was hotly denying he had bet on "that damned game" and telling what he thought of Leonard, whose grudge against him appeared to be founded on the fact that Speaker d'd not claim him for Cleveland when Cobb asked waivers.

Wood was headed back east, having disappeared as soon as he had made his confession that he had wagered on the game and attempted to defend it on the grounds that all the players in the leagues made a practice of wagering on their own teams.

Leonard, still in California, was quoted as gloatingly declaring he was even with Cobb and Speaker, but sorry he had been compelled to drag Wood into it.

Haskin's Letter

as long as there are enough staff offices to serve the combatant branch and maintain an efficient peace-time operation, the output of the Naval Academy shall be diverted to the line, where it is considered the training will give the greatest return in preparedness.

Although authority is given for the appointment to the academy of a hundred men from the enlisted personnel each year, there were only eighty-four in the entering class this year and ninety-four last year. It is hoped that in 1927 the full quota may be obtained.

A drive has also been made to give as much publicity as possible to the law of June 8, 1926, which authorizes the appointment of forty additional midshipmen at large. These are to be appointed by the president from among the sons of officers, soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps who were killed in action, or died prior to July 2, 1921, of wounds received or diseases contracted in line of duty during the World War.

A further provision of this law is that half of these appointments shall be made from among the sons of officers and the other half from those of warrant officers and enlisted personnel. If the full authorized quota of this group can be attained, it will aid in bringing the number of new officers up to the necessary requirements.

The passage of the bill providing for a five-year building program for naval aviation has increased the problem of specially trained aviation personnel. There has been this shortage for several years, since naval aviation is primarily a war-time development, and consequently nearly all of the Navel Reserve aviators who had entered the service in 1917 and 1918 were lost to the service after the war. One of the methods the department has taken to combat this shortage of aviation personnel has been to introduce a course of flight training for all midshipmen at the academy. This serves to give them basic training in aviation and makes it possible to sift out the best aviation material in each class for future training at Pensacola at decreased expense to the government.

The Navy Department feels that it was difficult enough to keep apace with officers requirements without having added the problem of meeting the situation with a reduced number of congressional appointments.

Regardless of military dress restrictions the Army and Navy will have to be content with a tie until next fall.—Martins Ferry Times.

Ohioan is Blinded By Acid; Estranged Wife is Arrested

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 22—Carl Gratziano was in Grant hospital today, with the sight of one of his eyes probably destroyed, physicians said, while his wife, Mrs. Laura Gratziano, 27, was held by police. The woman, it is alleged threw acid in her husband's face at the latter's home here. They had been separated several months. Mrs. Gratziano carried her year-old baby in her arms as she went to her husband's home and threw the acid upon him.

1926 taxes became a lien April 11, 1926, the day preceding the second Monday in April.

First half must be paid not later than December 20th, 1926. Last Half must be paid not later than June 20th, 1927.

The correct way to pay a year's tax without penalty is to pay in December for December and the following June.

Penalty on delinquent Real Estate and Personal Property is 10 per cent.

When writing for a statement of your taxes, remember property appears on the Treasurer's books in the name of the person having title on April 11th, 1926 and that the law requires the Treasurer's books and receipts to be made out in the name of the party owning property when the lien took effect.

In writing for statement of taxes, always send last receipt, or give name of owner in April 1926, stating plainly in what city, town or township located, and whether real or personal property.

When you write for statement or pay by mail, enclose a self addressed stamped envelope for reply.

Examine your receipts and see that they are correct before you leave the Treasurer's Office.

Treasurer's Office will be open from 7 A. M. to 5:00 P. M.

ENTERTAINING ANGEL

CHAPTER-THIRTY TWO.

"Oh!" was Jim's only reply to this naive statement. What more could he say?

"I've got to see it through, Jim. It's my personal fight. It hasn't anything to do with the company."

"But don't you think it's a little something that he went off on a drunk and missed his performance?"

"Yes. Yes, of course. That complicates it. But . . ."

He didn't finish. Jim shrugged. He was beginning to wonder if he knew what it was all about. "Life among the nuts," he thought, with a grim flash of humor.

"I don't want you to leave, Jim."

"But I'm through, I tell you. I can't handle Murry. Nobody can."

"I wonder."

Jim, at this, glanced around at Julian. "How're you going to do it? Heaven knows I've tried. But he won't hold to anything. Put your thumb down on him and he isn't there."

"I've been trying to think something out, Jim. Of course, I don't know anything about business, but I realize that I oughtn't just to go on handing him money .. .. . ."

"I can't see it."

"No. But I was wondering if a lawyer couldn't help us."

"Incorporate, you mean."

"I hadn't thought as definitely as that. I'm simply no good about those things. They scare me. But why couldn't we?"

"H'm!" Jim considered the situation. "You could do that. Yes, you could do that. But you'd have to make him agree to accept less than half the stock. Not over forty-nine per cent. But . . . . see here, Julian, will you let me say it right out . . . what I think?"

"Yes," replied Julian, and swallowed.

"Well, I'm just about as much disturbed about you as about him. I'm afraid he'll talk you around. And that'll leave us exactly where we are now, only you'll be more out of pocket."

"I've been sort of worried about that, too. I hate to be mean."

"Well, there we are!"

"But wait a minute. . . . I'm trying to think this out . . .. .. Why can't I just send him to you?"

"Where'll that get us? What can I do?"

"Well, suppose I say I won't put up any more money unless he agrees to go into a corporation and accept forty-nine per cent as his share. Then you can have fifty-one per cent and manage the company.

"Fifty-one per cent?"

"Yes, you see . . ."

"But, good God! Where do you come in?"

"Well, it really doesn't make much difference to me if we can only . . ."

"You can't give me fifty-one per cent," said Jim, with a snap in his voice.

His pride was touched. Julian hadn't thought of that possibility.

"But if you're to manage the company. . . ."

"Wait a minute! I want to think!"

They walked slowly along. Julian inhaled the drug-like scent of the flowers and stared out into the luminous dry air. He pressed a hand lightly to his lip. He felt confused, wretched. Something had to be done. He didn't know what, but it had to be something.

"I tell you what I'll do," said Jim crisply. "If you want to give me the responsibility of managing the troupe .. .. ."

"I do, there's nobody else."

". . . I'll accept twenty per cent. You take forty and give Murry forty. Then let me have your proxy and I can handle him. I'll work at my present salary. We certainly can't go on loading up our overhead. Twenty per cent would give me an incentive to manage the thing carefully, and if I do that, it's possible to make a little money for all three of us."

"But twenty per cent . . ."

"I couldn't accept more," said Jim.

They had swung around toward the hotel.

"There he is," Jim remarked, guardedly.

There, indeed, he was, descending the steps, a splendid figure in the familiar flannels and the belted-in coat, swinging his cane. He wore his hat slightly on one side, and moved jauntily.

"Impersonating the owner of the hotel," muttered Jim.

The loosely classical features spread in a benevolent smile.

"My dear young friends,' the sonorous voice floated before him down the path, "it is indeed a pleasure to see you enjoying this exquisite spot. How beautiful it is! And the flowers! I regret more deeply than I can tell you that the arduous demands of an actor's career have made it impossible for me to familiarize myself with . . ."

"I'll leave you," said Jim, in that crisp way and was gone.

Murry Watt lifted his face toward the sky and spread his arms dramatically.

"God's country!" The words rang out roundly over the expense of blossoms. "God's country, indeed! How it fills the soul with promise! As I was about to say, dear Julian, it is to me a deep regret that the circumstances of my life have deprived me of the great privilege of studying the beauties of nature that lie so richly and invitingly about us. The flowers, for example. What a deep mental resource it would give one to know each blossom bontanically, its history, its Latin name. Rose, for instance, is from rosa. That I do know. But nature surrounds us with innumerable beauties that we pass with no more than a careless glance."

They were ascending the steps. "Do be seated, dear friend. It is so delightful to have a moment of relaxation. Ours is, indeed, a busy life."

But Julian stood. It was coming. And he was afraid. He had never learned to say no. How could he say it now; embarass and doubtless hurt this fatuous, amiable, vague man; bring him up short, all sails aback. And yet, surely, this was the moment to take his stand or fail in Jim's eyes. No, he couldn't sit. He felt the watery eyes on him.

"Only one difficulty disturbs me today, dear Julian. There must always, it appears, be a fly in the ointment. Jim, I observed, was talking with you. Perhaps he told you of his unfortunate announcement to me?

"I regret to tell you he gave me notice this morning. We can ill spare him. We have been more than fortunate to keep him thus long. He is a most valuable young man, both efficient and honest. I have been considering what course we might take with him. Money, I have discovered in my progress through this preoccupied world, is only too often a salve to wounded pride. I think, in spite of his hasty refusal, that a little more money might bring him to reason. And that brings me to another matter which occurs to me that you and I, as partners, ought, perhaps, to go over the present situation of the Wayside Theater with some deliberation. You will understand, dear friend, I am sure, my heart-felt wish to take you into my confidence in the fullest possible manner. That, indeed, I must do. It is my duty, no less .. .. . It is, indeed, a pleasure to inform you that we stand on the very threshhold of success. Thanks to your friendly regard for an art, to your open-handed generosity . . ."

"I'd rather not talk about that!" It wasn't the best of beginnings for Julian. He shifted his feet, and gazed uncomfortably at an automobile that was parked in the driveway.

CERAMIC BOOKS MEIGHAN FILM

Paramount Star to Appear Here in "The Canadian."

A story of the great open spaces with nary a cowboy, Indian or dirty-dog villain. A tale of Canada with hardly any snow and not a single Northwest Mounted Policeman. If it were only for the absence of these two features, Thomas Meighan's latest Paramount feature, "The Canadian," which arrives at the Ceramic theatre Thursday for a three-day run, would be a fine picture! But add a stirring plot, one that won success on the stage as W. Somerset Maughham's "The Land of Promise;" a strong cast, headed by Mona Palma, Wyndham Standing, Dale Fuller and Charles Winninger; and the capable direction of William Beaudine; and a better-than-average film is sure to be the result.

Meighan enacts the part of a wheat harvester who works for his friend, Wyndham Standing, in an effort to finance a return to his own fields. While living with Standing, he meets the latter's sister, Mona Palma, a young English woman, just arrived in the provinces after having lost all her money. The new mode of living comes hard and she soon embroils herself with Standing's wife, Dale Fuller. Knowing that Meighan is "looking for a wife who will work," she offers herself and he takes her to his little cabin, off in the center of a vast wilderness of wheat.

The Canadian's eternal struggle with the climate for a living, and the vast underlying drama in which a heman tries to break down the resistance of his cultured wife, help build up toward the picture's dramatic climax.

In it, Meighan is said to do the best work of his career. Arthur Stringer adapted Maugham's play. J. Clarkson Miller wrote the scenario.

HARRY LAUDER HERE TONIGHT

Company of Clever Entertainers at Ceramic.

Sir Harry Lauder's practice of asking his audience to join in the choruses of his songs is not original with the Scottish comedian, although he is one of the few entertainers who has ever succeeded in making American audiences respond. Chorus singing by the audience is a common diversion in England and Scotland, as well as in most of the British possessions.

The first year that Lauder tried to get the co-operation of his American audiences he failed to break through the American fear of "hearing one's own voice in public," but this reserve has now been completely broken down, and Lauder audiences, after a little skillful persuasion, join in the choruses with a will.

This will be one of the interesting features of the engagement of Lauder and his company of clever entertainers at the Ceramic theatre tonight.

'Ben-Hur' Written By Noted Soldier, Statesman, Author

Great Book by Distinguished Indianian, General Lew Wallace, Antedates Typewriter Era.

"Ben-Hur' was the product of a distinguished Indianian, General Lew Wallace, equally noted as soldier, statesman and author. Begun in 1875 and finished in 1880, its more than 100,000 words were twice written by hand—the last great book antedating the typewriter era.

Tradition says that General Wallace conceived the idea of writing "Ben-Hur" after a talk with "Bob" Ingersoll. "Is there a God?" asked Lew. "I don't know; do you?" "Is there a future life?" again asked Wallace. "I don't know; do you?" again replied Ingersoll. "Was Christ divine?" persisted the general. "I don't know; do you?" shot back Bob. And then Col. Robert G. Ingersoll gave his friend a three-hour blast on this subject that made Wallace feel himself an ignoramus.

He went home and studied and finally decided to write the high theme and became neither skeptic nor indifferentist but a convinced believer.

After a year spent on the story of the Wise Men, there came to him the main story of Ben-Hur twixt the Birth and Death of Jesus. Under a wide-spreading beech tree at Crawfordsville, Ind., the main part of "Ben Hur" was penned. The last book was written in a big adobe room of the governor's palace in Sante Fe, New Mexico. Here from 1878 to 1881 General Wallace ruled the territorials for his employer, Uncle Sam.

President James A. Garfield was among those who personally thanked Wallace for the pleasure afforded by his book. It did not become a real best seller until two or three years after publication. Its extraordinary career thereafter included a general circulation like the Bible's, translation into ten languages, a special Italian version under the auspices of the Holy See, and largest single sale ever made by any book; an order of 1,000,000 copies from a Chicago mail-order house.

Lew Wallace was born at Brookville, Ind., in 1827 and died at Crawfordsville in 1905. In the Civil war he became a general officer and corp commander at Shiloah and Corinth. After the publication of "Ben-Hur" he was named U. S. Minister to Turkey, serving 1881-1885. His other well-known novels are "A Fair God" and "The Prince of India."

Lawrence Barrett, Tommaso Salvini, and the Kiralfys for years begged Mr. Wallace to let them dramatize "Ben-Hur," but the author, doubting the possibility of staging such a work reverently, held back for nearly 20 years until in 1899 Abraham L. Erlanger presented a plan that satisfied his scruples and permitted a reverent and beautiful stage "Ben-Hur." For the 22 seasons of the dramatic presentation and now in the $4,000,000 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization, the wishes of General Wallace have been carefully and honorably adhered to.

A Treatment That Ends Night Coughs In 15 Minutes.

Persistent night coughing is usually due to causes which cough syrups and patent medicine do not touch. A remarkable prescription known as Thoxine, working on an entirely different principle, goes direct to the cause, and is guaranteed to stop the stubbornest cough within 15 minutes. One swallow is all that's needed. If it fails, get your money back. No chloroform or other harmful drugs. Safe for children. Equally good for sore throat for which purpose it is far superior to gargles. 35c., 60c. and $1.00. At all druggists.

MORNING MAIL DELIVERY ON CHRISTMAS DAY

Postmaster McClure Again Appeals for Patron's Co-operation.

PEAK REACHED

Hints Given on Handling of Yuletide Packages.

No deliveries after noon on Christmas day—mail early for delivery before the holidays.

This is the advice given today by Postmaster Edwin McClure to patrons of East Liverpool postoffices.

An additional force of about a dozen workers will help postal employes in the Yuletide business this week. Another truck has been pressed into the parcel post service, while extra carriers and clerks are also on the job.

Christmas cards are going through the office by the thousands. Here are a few of the hints outlined by McClure relative to handling and mailing Christmas packages:

"All parcels must be securely wrapped or packed. Use strong paper and heavy twine.

Fragile Objects.

"Articles easily broken or crushed must be crated or securely wrapped. Use liberal quantities of excelsior, or like material, in, around, and between the articles and the outside container.

"Glassware, fragile tops, crockery must be packed so as to prevent the escape of particles or pieces if broken in transit.

"Cigars: Ordinary boxes of cigars wrapped in paper will not be accepted. Pack in a manner to prevent damage by shock or jar. Wrap in corrugated pasteboard or similar material.

"All articles easily broken or damaged must be plainly marked Fragile.

"Addresses should be complete, with house number and name of street, postoffice box or rural-route number, and typed or plainly written in ink. A return card should be placed in the upper left corner of every piece of mail. If a tag is used, the address and return card should also be written on the wrapper for use if the tag is lost and a copy of the address should be inclosed inside the parcel.

"Postage must be fully prepaid on all mail. Affix the required amount of postage in the upper right corner.

"Christmas gifts and cards addressed to points within one day's travel should be mailed not later than December 20. Parcels and cards for local delivery should be mailed not later than December 22.

"Parcel and Envelopes may be indorsed: "Please do not open until Christmas."

Special Delivery Service

"The early mailing of Christmas cards is just as important as parcels. Millions of these cards, separate and in envelopes, are mailed each Christmas. Consequently, great congestion and delay occurs in large post offices when they are mailed within a day or two of Christmas. Therefore, if you want your Christmas greetings to reach your relatives and friends on or before Christmas day, follow the instructions in the preceding paragraph relative to mailing early and be certain of delivery before Christmas.

"Special-delivery service is obtained by affixing a special-delivery stamp of the proper denomination, or its equivalent in ordinary stamps, in addition to the regular postage. When ordinary stamps are used, the words "SPECIAL DELIVERY" must be printed directly below, BUT NOT ON THE STAMP. Special delivery is for speed and not for safety. Valuable mail should be registered or insured. If mailed in time the use of a special-delivery stamp will insure delivery on Christmas day.

"All valuable domestic parcel-post mail should be insured. Insurance fees: Value not exceeding $5, 5 cents, not exceeding $25, 8 cents; not exceeding $50, 10 cents; not exceeding $100, 25 cents.

"Coin, currency, jewelry, and articles of similar value should be sent as SEALED FIRST-CLASS REGISTERED MAIL.

"Parcel-post, also third-class matter may be sent C. O. D. from one money-order postoffice to another."

Possibily that historic tooth found in a western coal deposit resulted from a gnashing of teeth by some fellow who had been told the price.—Marion Star.

Home-made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly

Finest cough medicine you ever used. Family supply easily made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup, or clarified honey. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, famous for healing the membranes.

Cleveland Owes State $89,510 in Crabbe Act Fines

COLUMBUS, Dec. 22.—Cleveland owes the state of Ohio $89,510.42 the state's share of fines collected in liquor law cases in that city during 1921 under the Crabbe Act, according to a decision announced yesterday by the state supreme court.

The supreme court reversed the decision of the Cuyahoga county common pleas court in its decision which contends that as the Crabbe Act superseded Cleveland's municipal court law this later act nullified those parts of the municipal court act which were in conflict with the Crabbe act.

As a result of this decision the attorney general's office estimates the city of Cleveland must pay into the state treasury approximately $500,000 representing the state's share of liquor fines collected under the Crabbe Act since 1921.

The city of Youngstown, it is estimated, will be required to pay between $50,000 and $60,000 into the state treasury as a result of the same decision.

AMIABLE college professors assure the President and Mr. Mellon that they should change their views on the war debts.

Europe hates us already on account of those debts, and if we insist on payment, we may find ourselves in a war. So say the professors.

THAT would be sad, for we do not want more war. But the best way to get into war is to show that you are afraid of it. The best way to keep out of it, is to be ready for it, and meet it three-quarters of the way, if it starts coming.

HOWEVER, there is no doubt as to the exact value of professors, as judges of war conditions.

Napoleon Bonaparte knew a good deal about war. When he started on his Egyptian campaign, he took with him solemn professors from the Academy of Science in Paris. Their presence lent a dignified touch to the expedition.

BUT when real fighting came, Napoleon formed a square of men, hollow in the middle, and gave the order, "Scientists and donkeys in the center."

IF THE professors persuaded President Coolidge that there is danger of war, perhaps he will persuade somebody to build some fighting airships that will fight and give American fighting airmen a chance.

YESTERDAY congress approved a scheme to spend $105,000,000 on 10 new cruisers.

Those are nice toys, and would make amusing targets for foreign airmen. The money they cost, honestly spent, would build enough airships to make this nation safe against any possible attack.

Are You Afraid To Diet?

Many people carry around surplus pounds of fat but are afraid to try dieting because they think it is painful or dangerous or a great hardship on the appetite.

A new booklet on Weight Control, issued through our Washington Information Bureau, sets forth both the simple rules of getting you weight under control and keeping it there, and the reasons back of the rules. A simple guide to the relationship between what you eat and what you weigh. There is nothing painful, dangerous, or difficult in its recommendations. Includes menus, calory lists, weight tables, and other data.

Also shows thin people the road to health and strength.

A useful, common sense, practical booklet on the much discussed subject of weight and health, available for six cents postage and handling charge.

Frederic J. Haskin, Director, The East Liverpool Review-Tribune Information Bureau, Washington, D. C.

14 WITNESSES TESTIFY FOR PROSECUTION IN KENNEY MURDER

State May Rest Case Before Adjournment Tonight.

Defense Expected to Get Its Inning Tomorrow.

Completion of state testimony against Nick Scaccuto, accused of the murder of Patrolman James Kenney, Wellsville, before adjournment at 5 o'clock tonight, was indicated as common pleas court recessed at Lisbon at noon today with 14 out of the prosecution's 22 witnesses having been on the stand.

One Witness Excused.

If the examination of witnesses continues with the rapidity that marked the morning session, the prosecution probably will be able to rest at the close of the afternoon.

Unless Judge David Thomas, of Marietta orders a night session, upon which he has made no announcement, the 15 defense witnesses will begin their testimony tomorrow morning should the state get through today.

Witnesses who testified at the morning session included Fred Herlin, C. & P. railroad detective; Arthur Newton, former acting chief of police; Mayor W. L. Fogo, Thomas Madden, volunteer fireman and at present a special patrolman; Patrolman Edward Pugh; Frank Fusco, Fred Morgan, Mrs. Willa B. McIntyre and Charles Montgomery.

Mrs. David Morgan, state witness, was unable to appear for examination. A physician's certificate was presented to indicate her physical condition did not permit her presence in the court room.

Fred Morgan on Stand.

Under direct examination by Prosecutor Brookes, Fred Morgan, of 1115 Commerce street, employed at the Wellsville railroad shops, testified to remembering the night Kenney was killed. He said he talked with Officers Oyster and Excell at midnight and that he saw an automobile between Commerce and Anderson avenue, bearing plate 249,988, and that he learned later this car was owned by Rocco Carbicella. The witness described the car and said some of the side curtains were up.

He went into his home, he testified, and a little later heard a commotion in front of his house. He said he went out and pulled on the light and saw men standing there. One wore dark clothing and a cap of light hue. This man, he said, was of slender build and slightly stooped.

"You see that man in the courtroom now?" the witness was asked.

"That's him there," the witness replied as Prosecutor Brookes asked the defendant to stand up.

Morgan swore that when he went out to the porch of his home, he saw two men further up the street and two men back of him and that there were five men all together; that an automobile was standing east of these

FORMER CANTON WOMAN MISSING

Picture of Mrs. Gladys W. Houck, wife of Dr. Knute Houck, who disappeared from her Washington, D. C., home. Only her child remained. Her husband, suffering from a mental collapse, was located at Hornell, N. Y., and returned to Washington, where he was held for investigation. Mrs. Houck's family at Canton, O., said the couple had been very happy. Dr. Houck had recently suffered a breakdown from overwork, they said.

Mrs. Gladys Walter Houck Case Is Battling Police

Husband, Psychiatrist, Victim of His Own Specialty, is Held Under Technical Arrest in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—The police apparently were as far away as ever today from a solution of the disappearance of Mrs. Gladys Walter Houck, formerly of Canton, Ohio, wife of Dr. Knute Houck, an alienist and psychiatrist, who is held under technical arrest at Gallinger hospital.

Dr. Houck, a victim of his own specialty, is described as gradually recovering from a violent mental lapse. In his lucid moments he vehemently denies that he killed his wife or that he knows what became of her. He admits they quarreled on the night of December 14, and that "I beat her," but he contends that Mrs. Houck left their home early Wednesday morning and that was the last he saw of her.

After that, according to the bits the police have been able to get from him, the alienist "went crazy." He was picked up in Hornell, N. Y., violently insane and running the street dressed in his under-clothing.

The authorities believe that Mrs. Houck, either has suffered a nervous breakdown and is in hiding somewhere, or that she has committed suicide. They are more inclined to ac-

ROBBERS RAID BARBER SHOP

Three razors, valued at $10.50, a raincoat, worth $20, and three towels, valued at $1, were stolen from the Peter Troisieme barber shop, 247½ West Sixth street, Monday night, according to a report made today to police.

The robbers forced an entrance to the shop by removing a screen which covered a transom over a rear door. After making a search of the place, they left by the front door which was unlocked from the inside.

Patrolman William Lister investigated the robbery.

FORMER INDIAN PILOT DENIES ROLE IN 'FIXED' BASEBALL GAME

"I am Innocent of Any Wrong-doing," he Declares.

PLACED NO BETS

Charges That "Dutch" Leonard Deliberately Falsified.

DETROIT, Dec. 22.—A scathing attack was made by Circuit Court Judge Guy A. Miller, probably University of Michigan's most famous pitcher of all time, on Commissioner Kenesaw Landis today for his publication of charges against Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker.

"I personally think Judge Landis' act in publishing this story is indefensible and is in line with his whole history of hypocritical sensationalism ever since his $29,- and every other lawyer in the United States knew would not stand up," Judge Miller said in a statement.

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 22.—Tris Speaker, former leader of the Cleveland Indians, declared that he had been made the "goat" in the alleged "thrown" game between Detroit and Cleveland with only the word of one man to substantiate the charges, in a statement issued here today.

Speaker insisted that evidence in Judge Landis' hands should prove that he had no knowledge of the supposed crooked game.

The statement follows:

"I have been made the goat of that game.

"I want the public to know and believe me when I say I am entirely innocent of any wrong-doing in connection with the alleged throwing of that game or placing a bet on the result. I didn't know any bets had been made on the game until last June when the matter was called to my attention by Ban Johnson, president of the league.

Not Mentioned in Letters.

"The testimony on file in the office of Commissioner Landis will vindicate me. I am not mentioned in the letters written to 'Dutch' Leonard by either Ty Cobb or Joe Wood. The reason is plain. I knew nothing of any wagers or of any 'fixing.' The only thing they say they have against me is the word of the man who is behind this entire flare-up, Leonard. I have requested repeatedly that Leonard be brought in to face me but he has positively refused to come in to a meeting.

"Leonard has deliberately falsified in any statement he has made that implicates me. I never bet a single

ALLEGED 'MASTER MIND' TELLS JURY HE NEVER SAW M'DERMOTT BEFORE

Looking as if he Had Stepped From Barber Shop Instead of From County Jail, Wealthy Massillon Hardware Dealer Testifies for Defense in Trial in Canton Court.

PURPORTED CO-CONSPIRATOR OFFERS "ALIBI" FOR NIGHT OF SLAYING

Witness Reveals His Whereabouts on Days Defendant Was Said to Have Conferred With Him for Instructions, Denies Telephone Calls and Swears Pat Never Visited His Store.

CANTON, O., Dec. 22.—With the testimony of the defendant, who will take his fate in his own hands and plead his innocence from the witness stand, the defense in the trial of Pat McDermott, charged with the murder of Don R. Mellett, vice crusading editor, expects to close their case late this afternoon. Louis Mazer, indicted with McDermott, and Ben Rudner who testified during the morning, is expected to precede McDermott to the stand.

By DAVID P. SENTNER.

CANTON, O., Dec. 22.—Maintaining he "never saw Pat McDermott before today," Ben Rudner, alleged chief conspirator in the slaying of Don Mellett, vice crusading editor, denied categorically each bit of the state's evidence against him today from the witness stand at the trial of McDermott for the Mellet murder.

Rudner, who is a wealthy Massillon hardware dealer, looked as if he had stepped from a barber shop instead of from the county jail. He admitted with a smile under cross-examination that he had served a term in Atlanta penitentiary for liquor conspiracy and had been convicted of robbery and assault and battery.

"Do you know this man Pat McDermott?"

"I never say him before in my life," the witness answered.

Rudner furnished an "alibi" for the night of the murder, for the days McDermott was said to have visited him for instructions, and for the time the defendant was alleged to have telephoned him and then visited him at his store to be paid off for the killing.

Charge He Hired McDermott.

Despite telephone company records of two long distance calls to his store shown him by the prosecution, the witness denied he had ever received them.

Rudner, indicted with Louis Mazer, indicted "jungle king" and McDermott for the murder, is charged by the state with hiring McDermott to "bump off" Mellett because of the editor's attacks on the bootlegging ring and its corruption of the police department.

"I want to take you to the eighth day of July, Benny," E. L. Mills, defense counsel began.

It was on July 8, 9 and 10 that the state alleges McDermoot and Kscholk visited Massillon where McDermott is alleged to have received his orders from Rudner regarding the Mellett "job."

Corroborates Other Testimony.

Rudner testified in detail regarding his business and social activities during this period, corroborating the testimony of previous Rudner "alibi witnesses."

"On the night of July 8 I was suffering from a felon on my finger," Rudner testified.

"I got up at midnight and drove to Canton to look for a doctor. We didn't find any, motored back to Massillon and went to the hospital. It was after

Start for Canton Trial, But Land In Another Court

Paul Timberlake, Bud Wormer, James Ward, William Parsons and Barney Thomas, all of East Liverpool, riding in Timberlake's automobile, started early Monday morning for Canton to "listen in" on the trial of Pat McDermott, charged with the murder of Don R. Mellett, crusading editor, but instead crashed into another motor car and eventually fell into the hands of Deputy Sheriff E. J. Fitzgerald and Deputy Game Warden Lon Boring, of Lisbon.

Timberlake, whose car is alleged to have wrecked a machine driven by John Severn, of Minerva, in a collision near Lynchburg, was fined $25 and costs on a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated, when he faced Justice M. K. Zimerman at Lisbon last night. Parsons was fined $1 and the others $5 each on intoxication charges.

Wormer, Ward and Thomas, unable to pay, were committed to jail. Timberlake and Parsons arranged to pay.

CHRISTMAS SUSPENSION OF OPERATIONS IN EAST LIVERPOOL DISTRICT POTTERIES WILL RANGE FROM TWO DAYS TO TWO WEEKS

A tone of optimism for 1927 business was expressed today by general ware manufacturers of the East Liverpool district in announcing yuletide suspensions of pottery operations ranging from two days to two weeks.

"The outlook for business next year is brighter than it was at this time last year" said the plant owners.

The Christmas suspension in most plants will be from a week to two weeks. Only in one or two cases will plants be idle for more than two weeks, while in others only a two-day vacation will be given.

Most workers will clean up today or tomorrow, although some plants suspended last Saturday until after the first of the year. Most plants will resume in full on January 3.

Many manufacturers will put new patterns on the market during the coming year. These are expected to attract the eye of buyers, who will attend the annual pottery and glass show in Pittsburgh during January.

Several manufacturers paid their employes last Saturday, while others will pay today, Thursday or Friday.

Here is the duration of the Christmas loaf in the respective plants:

Smith-Phillips China company—Closed for two weeks; will resume operations on January 3.

Hall China company (two plants)—Expect to be idle for about two weeks, resuming work on January 3.

C. C. Thompson Pottery company—Clay shops will be closed for about 10 days, but other departments will loaf Christmas and New Year's only; will start in full on Janpary 3.

Homer Laughlin China company (six plants)—Will shut down Friday for Christmas only and will also be idle about three days next week when inventory will be taken.

Knowles, Taylor and Knowles company (four plants) — Close Wednesday for about a week. Expect to resume in all departments on January 3.

Edwin M. Knowles China company (two plants)—Expect to be idle about 10 days or two weeks. Will resume operations early in the new year.

Standard Pottery company — Down for about 10 days, resuming January 3. Some departments will work next week. Shop at New Cumberland will be closed for two holidays.

WASHINGTON STEWART'S LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22. — Gov. A. Victor Donahey of Ohio now is definitely a Democratic presidential possibility.

Donahey has declared, again and again, that he isn't a candidate. But if he's drafted—oh, well, of course, and all that sort of stuff. In other words, while nobody doubts the absolute sincerity of his denial that he wants the nomination, neither does anybody doubt for a minute that he has his fingers crossed.

VIC DONAHEY

Not being a candidate, Vic couldn't launch his own boom, but Thomas E. Dye, Ohio Democratic chairman, could come down to Washington and launch it for him, and he did.

UP to last election Atlee Pomerene was Ohio's Democratic favorite son, but his failure to beat Frank B. Willis for the senate snuffed him out.

Now the field's clear for Vic, so far as Ohio's concerned.

What opposition does he face from elsewhere?

Notably Gov. Al Smith of New York, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, Senator Jim Reed of Missouri and—at least theoretically — William G. McAdoo.

VIC'S boosters size up their candidate's rivals thus:

Al Smith—too wet; a Tammanyite; sure to be slaughtered by the K. K. K.

Albert C. Ritchie—of only statewide appeal; too wet, also.

Jim Reed—has antagonized nearly everybody; too vitriolic, about 100 per cent.

William G. McAdoo—too dry; too K. K. K.; his boom's busted, anyway.

NOW hearken to his friends' estimate of Donahey:

A compromise Democratic candidate is indicated for 1928. Vic would be an all-round compromise.

His geography's all right—eastern or western, as you please.

He's a vote getter—just entering on his third term as Democratic governor of a usually strongly Republican state.

No. K. K. K. can find fault with him as an "anti;" no "anti" can find fault with him as a K. K. K.

Though known as a dry, he never has harped on the subject sufficiently to make the wets very sore.

Senator Caraway says the Democratic nominee in 1928 will be a dark horse and Vic can qualify as something brunet, up to date, at any hey boom, "how fond the voters are of referring to a politician as 'honest' if he gives them a reasonble excuse. It almost suggests that honest politicians are scarce."

THIS is a Donahey-ite diagnosis. It's just given for whatever it may be worth. Smith, Ritchie, Reed and McAdoo pluggers say it's all wrong.

Nobody calls Vic brilliant or looks to him for flights of eloquence. It is claimed for him that he's a rugged, substantial type; that he has sound common sense; that he can talk straight from the shoulder, if without any fancy figures of speech! that he's been a good governor and that he was a good state auditor for a long time before that.

They call him "Honest Vic."

"It's odd," observes Congressman Davey ,who helped launch the Dona-

Woman Killed as She Returns From Yule Buying Trip

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 22.—Mrs. Ida S. Bowman, 46, was dead here today, as the result of injuries sustained when she was struck by a motor truck last night, while returning from a Christmas shopping trip. Her identiy was established when W. C. Kennedy, by whom she was employed, heard her description broadcast from a local station here, after she had been taken unconscious to a hospital.

"SPANGLES" HUMAN STORY

Circus Film Scores in Showing at American.

One of the most human stories ever brought to the screen.

This is the way you will probably feel about "Spangles," the Universal-Jewel now at the American.

Put the sincere characters imagined by Nellie Revell, the author, into the capable hands of Pat O'Malley and Marian Nixon, with Hobart Bosworth and Gladys Brockwell and others in support, and you're sure to have something worth while. Add to that the spectacular features of a great circus, with not only the acts, the animals, the thrills under the big top, but the fascinating life behind the scenes, and you have a very unusual picture. Of such is "Spangles."

O'Malley is seen in the role of a youth who, escaping from an escapade which places him under suspicion of crime, "joins up" with the circus as a "roughneck" or laborer, and meets the pretty star bareback rider, and pet of the show-folk, which sympathetic role is portrayed by Miss Nixon.

The love affair between the "razorback"—another circus term for laborer—and the equestriene gives opportunities for bringing out many points of circus etiquette and caste, all of which have been fully utilized by Director Frank O'Connor. The side-lights on circus life, as well as the scenes of the freaks at work and at play, which supply the indispensable "comedy relief," will please the children particularly, and have not been allowed to interfere with the orderly and dramatic development of the story.

Conflict is supplied by Hobart Bosworth, as the circus owner, who is also in love with the girl "Spangles," and manages to place a number of obstacles in O'Malley's way. Gladys Brockwell appears in the sympathetic role of the lion-tamer, while a newcomer, Jay Emmett, gives a good portrayal of the third of 'Spangles' suitors.

Electric refrigerators are being introduced into tropical Porto Rico.

"Jiggs" Losteiner Will Spend Yule Day in Darkness

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 22.—While the rest of the world feasts and celebrates Christmas Day next Saturday, George "Jiggs" Losteiner, Cleveland gangster and gunman serving a life sentence at the Ohio state penitentiary, will spend his sixth consecutive Christmas in solitary confinement at the big prison, meditating upon the murder of a Cleveland policeman, for which he is "up for life." This stipulation was part of "Jiggs'" sentence, because his victim died on Christmas day. Losteiner, together with others who participated in the recent prison break, has been in solitary confinement since his recapture and as additional punishment, is not permitted to shave.

Q. Of what are the pads used on football suits made? H. S. B.

A. Belgian sponge rubber is used in the shoulder, kidney and knee pads, and in the head gear. This has been found superior to the piano felt formerly used, and it is also said to be much lighter.

Q. How many licensed broadcasting stations are there? M. N.

A. The Department of Commerce says there are 640.

Q. What is the thickness of the steel armor plates used on the naval battleships? E. H. M.

A. They are from 12 inches to 18 inches thick.

Q. When should evergreens be pruned? H. T

A. Dead wood shoud be removed whenever discovered. Other pruning should be done as new growth is starting. Many evergreens do not start growth from old wood so the pruning should not be severe enough to remove all the growing shoots from any branch.

Q. Which will weigh more, dry sand or wet sand? T. H. R.

A. The weight of dry sand ranges from 90 to 110 pounds per cubic foot. The weight of wet sand ranges from 118 to 129 pounds per cubic foot.

Q. When was the first horse car run in New York city? E. B.

A. It was in 1832, and it was on the Fourth Avenue line, running from Prince street as far as Murray Hill.

Q. In what period was the Ice Age included? C. A.

A. The great ice age occurred at the beginning of the Pleistocene Period. During this ice age there occurred several glacial periods marked by the extension of the ice sheets, separated by several interglacial periods marked by the partial disappearance of the ice.

Q. Which is the most harmful, pipe, cigar, or cigarette? F. J. A.

A. Wherever tobacco smoke strikes, it leaves a deposit of oil of tobacco which contains a small percentage of nicotine, a deadly poison. Smokers of cigarettes inhale the smoke into the lungs, where the oil of tobacco is deposited. In pipe smoking, the oil of tobacco forms a coating on the channel of the pipe, so that, the more the pipe is used, the stronger does the smoke drawn into the mouth become. The oil of tobacco is deposited in the mouth and absorbed into the system. In the smoking of cigars the oil of tobacco is burnt up as the cigar is consumed so that little is absorbed into the system. From the above description, it may be concluded that cigarettes are the most harmful of the three, because the smoke passes over the greatest surface of membrane. On the other hand, it must be added that a cigarette is a shorter smoke than a cigar.

Q. Who designed the White House? R. D. M.

A. The designer of the White House was James Hoban, born in Ireland about 1755. He came to the United States settling in Charleston, South Carolina, and later to Washington when the city was first laid out. He worked for the government for the greater part of his life. He is chiefly known for his work in connection with the White House, which he also rebuilt after the burning in 1814.

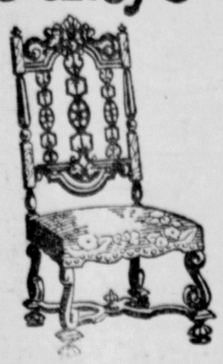

Q. Is it dangerous to use milk of a cow that has been suffering from hydrophobia? D. F.

A. Cows suffering from this disease usually stop giving milk in the first stages of it; hence there is very little danger of contracting hydrophobia from milk.

Another Baseball Scandal

The baseball public, still convalescent after the shock of revelations in connection with the "fixing" of the 1919 world's series between the Chicago White Sox and Cincinnati Reds, which resulted in the exile of several stars of the game, was given another setback today by Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis' charges involving two of the greatest idols of the national pastime.

Tyrus Cobb and Tris Speaker, star outfielders and former managers of the Detroit and Cleveland clubs of the American league, have been named with Hubert ("Dutch") Leonard and "Smoky" Joe Wood, now coach of the Yale baseball team, in the second scandal of the black year of 1919.

According to Judge Landis, who called the former Tiger and Indian stars to Chicago for a hearing on the allegations made by Leonard, who was waived out of the major leagues, the two ex-managers who announced their retirement a few weeks ago, are charged with betting on a "fixed" game between the Detroit and Cleveland teams on Sept. 25, 1919. With second place certain for the Indians, it is alleged it was agreed that Detroit should win in order to cinch third place in the Johnson circuit race. And the Tigers won the game.

Both Speaker and Cobb emphatically deny the charges, which are based on alleged evidence of gambling in a letter written by "Smoky" Joe Wood to Leonard, and later turned over to the baseball commissioner by the former Tiger pitcher.

Significant, indeed, in connection with the charges is the alleged story of a baseball player's revenge, the fulfillment of "Dutch" Leonard's purported promise to repay Cobb for what he terms the action of the former Detroit manager in "railroading" him out of baseball.

And, too, it is regrettable that Judge Landis lacked the authority to compel Leonard, the accuser, who is no longer in organized baseball, to face the accused.

Why, too, was so much time required to bring the charges to light? While, as Judge Landis says, "these men being out of baseball, no decision will be made, unless changed conditions in the future require it," the baseball commissioner is justified in the attitude that the good of the game demanded pitiless publicity. But the charges have blotted the escutcheon of four of baseball's one-time famous players.

Speeding Freight

The new president of the Erie Railroad, J. P. Bernet, exemplifies a new principle in railroading, whose value has been proved in his operation of the Nickel Plate.

When Bernet—who had been blacksmith, telegrapher and train dispatcher—was put in charge of the Nickel Plate, he concentrated on two things—getting freight business and speeding freight movements. The two went well together, for the more he speeded the freight, the more freight he got.

Railroads had long averaged about 15 miles a day for freight cars. They were just beginning to move a little faster. Bernet led the speeders. When American railroads in general succeeded in moving their freight an average of 22.4 miles a day, Bernet was moving his 47 miles a day.

Railroad men had held previously that the important thing in efficient transportation was to load locomotives with the maximum quantity of cars and freight. Bernet insisted that this was wise only in sparsely settled areas, and that in highly industrialized sections, the great desideratum was speed. He seems to have proved that.

Speed is today the cardinal principle of American industry. Volume of production is important, but it is speeding machinery and men that makes volume.

The successful speeders, however, are not jumping up and down and running around in circles. Bernet remains calm. Ford remains calm. Judge Gary remains calm. The successful captain of industry—or of anything else, for that matter, generally hurries what he is doing but doesn't let himself be hurried.

A Bank's Parking Service

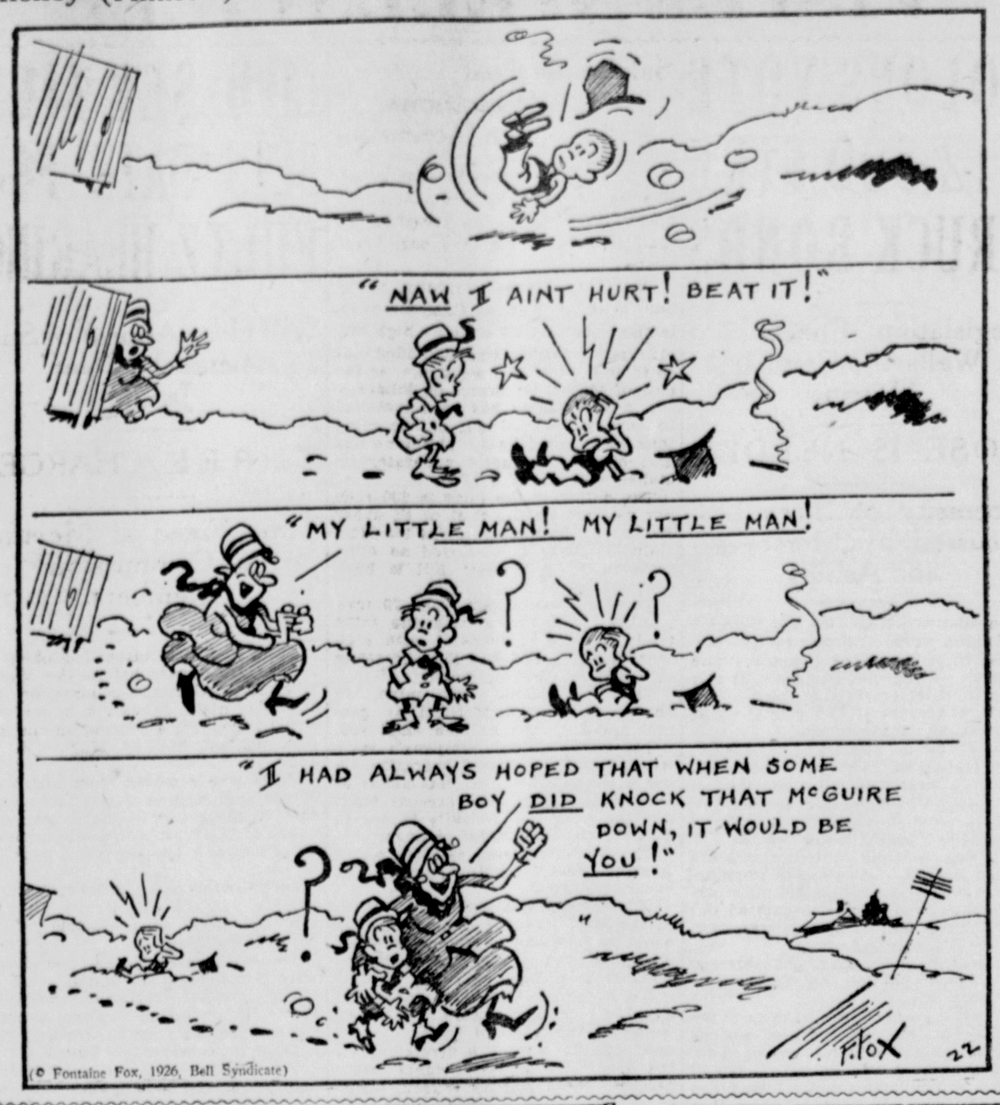

The First National Bank of Detroit leads the nation's banking institutions in providing garage space for patrons. Department stores all over the country have been doing this for a year or so, seeking a solution to the parking problem in business centers.

The Detroit bank is soon to build an 18-story annex for the use of its patrons and office tenants. Several floors will have office rooms, but others will provide garage space for 700 cars at one time. There will be special rates for tenants of the bank's office building. Patrons of the bank itself will have free storage privilege for a reasonable length of time. The two buildings will be connected by a bridge.

Perhaps cities that are young now, with their greatest growth ahead of them, will figure out ideal parking arrangements and ways of avoiding traffic congestion in their business centers. Older cities, that grew up and built up before the automobile's day, apparently must go in for skyscraper parking.

The Chinese can't understand why anybody should walk anywhere if there is any way to ride. Americans are coming to feel the same way about it.

A REDUCTION FOR CASH.

Any Scot will tell you that, while as a race the Scotch are thrifty, it is in Aberdeen that thrift is an exact science.

And it was in Aberdeen, so the story runs, that an especially frugal citizen entered an apothecary's shop or, as we would say in America, a drug store. He told the proprietor that he wished to purchase thripence worth of morphine.

The chemist pondered over a request so unusual. Customarily he sold the drug only on a physician's prescription; but this customer was known to him as reputable and responsible. Nevertheless, he must make sure the purpose was proper.

"Thripence worth of morphine, eh?" he said. "What would ye be wantin' in for?"

The native thought a moment.

"Tuppence," he said.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Park Row has many news "tipsters." They are pariahs of the editorial rooms, the invisible links connecting the underworld with the uppeer. Despised yet endured, they have often revived a whale of a yarn when all trails had grown cold.

Some of the most famous crime mysteries have been solved as result of their tips. The round up of the Rosenthal murderers in the Becker case was really due to cryptic messages to newspapers from professional tipsters.

The "tipster" is usually a "stool pigeon" for the police. To an extent he receives certain protection from his own petty crimes for the larger service of "squaking" on his intimates of the underworld.

Their lives are haunted by spectre of disaster for in their strata the wages of "squealing" is death. There are records of certain squealers being found murdered with their tongues cut out as a terrible warning.

The rewards of the "tipster" are slight considering the danger he invites. Yet accustomed to petty thieving he is quite satisfied with petty graft. Sometimes a twenty or fifty dollar bill is sufficient to unloose his tongue.

The "stool pigeon" must work. He isn't of the intelligence to fraternize on a social basis with the shrewd crook. And if he shows indication of being able to live without work he falls immediately under suspicion.

As a result he is usually an add-job man or engaged in other menial duties around the hangout of criminals and by spying he is often able to salvage bits of information that will send men to prison and sometimes the electric chair.

Speaking of the underworld, there is a phase of night life chaperonage these days that is to say the least different. Many beautiful women are being squired to public places by Longacre dice gamblers, boot leggers and other gorillas up from the East Side to wear open faced clothes and silk skimmers. These potential yeggs are heavy spenders and after a good day at the gaming table or rum running a diamond bracelet means absolutely nothing in their lives. Beautiful ladies, sometimes known to the stage and screen are not at all hesitant about occupying ring-side tables with these rather incongruous figures with blue black jowls, glittering pig eyes and stubbly pompadour hair. What they lack in social niceties, they apparently make up for in hefty bankrolls that are easily tapped. The supper clubs hail them as the biggest spenders. And ladies at least feel entirely secure from jazzing collegiates who "cut in" on dances.

The White Way's most consistent night owl is Nils T. Gruniand, known far and wide to radio fans as the announcer N. T. G. He is Boswell to Marcus Loew and arrives at Loew's office at 2 in the afternoon. An indefatigable worker he is usually free by eight in the evening. From then on until dawn he spends his time among several supper clubs in which he has a proprietory interest and for which he stages cabaret revues. He drives to his farm in Jersey at 7 in the morning and attends his cows and chickens. Grunland has been able to maintain this pace for years for the simple reason he has never tasted liquor.

In a yellowed program of the old Bowery theatre for 1878 I find the following artists listed: "Harry Clarke, Songs and Funny Sayings; Prof. Bensley and his feats on the Magic Barrell; Lottie Elliott, Double Face Dance and Allie Lamont in serio comic songs with slides."

HASKIN'S LETTER
By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Reducing Number of Middies.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 22.—The annual report of the Secretary of the Navy, recently issued, voices a protest against the clause in the naval appropriation bill which reduces the quota of midshipmen for Senators and Representatives from five to three each.

This clause reads, "That no part of this appropriation shall be available for the pay of any midshipmen whose admission subsequent to January 13, 1923, would result in exceeding at any time an allowance of three midshipmen for each Senator, Representative, and Delegate in Congress; of one midshipman for Porto Rico, a native of the island, appointed on nomination of the governor, and of three midshipmen from Porto Rico, appointed on nomination of the resident commissioner; and of two midshipmen for the District of Columbia."

In this way the quota of midshipmen for senators and representatives is reduced by a limitation on appropriation although the actual law authorizing five to each remains unchanged. Under this limitation the authorized quota of appointments at the Naval Academy for 1927 would be 2205, which includes the 40 additional midshipmen at large provided for under the law of June 8, 1926. Naval authorities explain that although this number is authorized it is impossible to have this number there at any one time on account for the failures, mental and physical, of midshipmen at the academy and candidates. This is also due in part to lack of filling the quota authorized from the enlisted personnel, naval reserve, and at large which can not be carried over from year to year.

It is also explained that the sudden reduction in the quota of midshipmen for senators and representatives has caused the entrance classes to be much smaller than the quota would indicate. This is because it is necessary for three midshipmen either to graduate or resign from certain districts before a vacancy occures. A senator or representative can not appoint three midshipmen each year from his district—he can have only three at the academy at a time. The class entering in 1926 had 576 members on October 1, while the size of the entering class of 1927 will probably be something over 700. It is estimated, however, that the class for 1928 will drop to 370.

Now an Officer Shortage.

The last five-appointment class will be graduated in 1927, and the approximate number of new line officers thus created will be 540. After that, on a basis of three appointments for each senator and representative, the graduating class will be only about 300 each year.

There is now an officer shortage, the authorized number of line officers being 5499 and the number at the present time in actual service being 5160. The Navy Department is of the opinion that the authorized number is the minimum figure necessary for meeting peace-time requirements and establishing a trained nucleus for war. It is believed to be very important that in time of war there be available for call men who have been thoroughly trained in naval procedure.

The full capacity of the Naval Academy at Annapolis is 2500. Many, therefore, feel that under the three-appointment quota there is an unnecessary waste of facilities. Many boys who go through the Navy Academy could not otherwise obtain a college education because they are not in a position to pay the necessary expense. The academy being a national institution, it would appear to be a benefit to the entire nation to have it operated to capacity as nearly as possible.

If there should be an excess of officers graduated over the number required for active service, these might be honorably discharged upon graduation to enter civil life and civil pursuits. The education thus obtained would equip them for better paid positions than they would otherwise be likely to qualify for. In addition, as said above, they would form a trained nucleus in the event of an emergency.

Each year a certain number of Naval Academy graduates are given staff-corps assignments. Usually there are 25 assigned to the Marine Corps, eight to the Supply Corps, eight to the Construction Corps and four to the Civil Engineer Corps. The future Naval Construction Corps and Civil Engineers are sent to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for a post graduate course of two years, while the embryo Marines are sent to Quantico, Virginia, for training.

The report of the secretary states flatly that "this large demand, with other service requirements upon the output of the Naval Academy, could only be met in full when the Naval Academy was on a five-appointment basis, and can not be met in the future unless the number of appointments is increased above three."

Will Reduce Line Strength.

The three-appointment basis will stabilize the line below its authorized strength at a number about 5000 instead of 5499, as authorized by law. The policy of the department is that

Rocco Carbicella Store and Frank Maggio Home Inspected.

MAP IN COURT

Four State Witnesses Testify Tuesday Afternoon.

In the custody of Sheriff George Wright and accompanying the jury that will determine his fate, Nick Scaccuto yesterday afternoon gazed into the yard of the Frank Maggio home, Commerce street, where police last May picked up the bullet-riddled body of Patrolman James Kenney, 28, for whose murder Scaccuto is on trial in common pleas court at Lisbon.

Scaccuto rode with Sheriff Wright and Deputies Lawrence Kindsvatter and Edward J. Fitzgerald. State and defense counsel were also members of the party.

The jury left Lisbon at 2:15 o'clock, accompanied by counsel for the state and defendant. Judge David H. Thomas, of Marietta, who will hear the case, also was a member of the party, announcing a desire to acquaint himself with the locations that may be referred to during the course of the trial.

Dr. J. M. VanFossan, of East Palestine, county coroner, took the stand as the first witness for the prosecution as the court reconvened following the Wellsville trip. He was placed under direct examination by Prosecuting Attorney Robert M. Brookes. Three other witnesses were called before court adjourned at 4:55 o'clock, including Mrs. Nancy Kenney, widow of the slain patrolman; Zanny Cronin, of Wellsville, and Richard Burns, of Jefferson county, a former Wellsville resident.

Defense attorneys are George T. Farrell and W. B. Moore, of Lisbon, and James E. O'Grady, of Wellsville.

The first place visited was the store of Rocco Carbicella, Main street, near Third. Sheriff Wright was asked by the state to call the attention of the jury to the main store room, the stock it contained, and the two small rooms immediately in the rear of the store.

Leaving the Carbicella store, the jury was taken to the home of Frank Maggio, 1224 Commerce street. A large crowd of people suddenly appeared in yards of homes in that locality and on the street as soon as the six cars containing the jury and attorneys parked opposiet the Maggio home. A photographer had his camera set on a tripod ready to snap the jury and counsel as they entered the yard of the Maggio residence.

The jury's attention was directed to the short space of yard between the front end of the porch and the front fence where the body of Patrolman Kenney was found riddled with bullet wounds the morning of May 17, last. The jury was then taken into the Maggio home, and the living room and parlor of the house was inspected.

Visit John Amato Home.

Two young women were standing on the side porch of this home when the jury entered the yard. In a rear room of the home was heard the cry of a baby. This was hushed by one of the women who picked up the tot and stood in a doorway observing the jury.

Across the street, to the home of John Amato, the jury was next taken. From Commerce street to an alley in the rear of this house at 1227 Commerce street, there is a passageway. The jurors walked to the rear alley, and then their attention was directed to the two-story frame dwelling at Commerce and Thirteenth street, formerly occupied by Richard Burns, and across Thirteenth street from this dwelling the store and residence of Frank Fusco.

The jurors then walked to the Fusco home. Then attention was directed to a window in the rear of the property. This window, the state charges was broken by Scacutto on the morning of May 17 when he climbed through it to get into the Fusco home. Immediately back of the window is a poultry yard, and the space back of the window is closed with chicken wire.

Reference was made to the Densmore and McIntire homes in the immediate vicinity, and also the direction "up" and "down" on Commerce street from the Maggio home.

The jury then went to Clover alley, and the location of Brick alley, with reference to Thirteenth street, was also pointed out bySheriff Wright. The cars then were driven west on Commerce street to Sixteenth street to Main, thence eastward to the Lisbon-Wellsville road and back to Lisbon.

Coroner Is First Witness.

Ten minutes after the return to Lisbon, the jurors resumed their places in the box.

A blue print of the city of Wellsville was placed on a stand facing the jury. This map was referred to in the opening statement of Attorney W. B. Moore, of defense counsel.

Prosecutor Brookes called Coroner J. M. Van Fossan of East Palestine as the first state witness.

Dr. Van Fossan testified relative to the autopy upon the body of Patrolman Kenney at the McLain morgue in Wellsville. The witness explained that he found one bullet entered at the base of the skull and passed out the right side of the face. The second wound was in the right side just over the hip, and bullet had been deflected upward into the lung. There was one bullet wound in the left heel, the witness explained, the ball passing clear through the heel, and also a wound in the right arm, the bullet shattering the bone. The fifth wound was on the left side of the body, about three inches to the left of the spine.

A bullet was handed the witness by Brookes, and he identified the exhibit as the ball that was taken from the lung of Kenney. A second bullet could not be identified by the witness.

"What wound in your opinion would cause death?" the witness was asked.

"The one in the head and the one in the side, both would cause death," he replied.

"Which of the two wounds would cause death the quickest?"

"The second wound."

There was no cross-examination.

Victim's Widow on Stand.

Placing her young child in the care of a companion, Mrs. Nancy Kenney, widow of the patrolman, who was in court accompanied by the parents of the murder victim was then called to the stand. The witness was weeping as she walked toward the witness box, and brushed a tear from her cheek as she raised her right hand to be sworn by Judge Thomas.

"You are the wife of James Kenney?" she was queried.

"Yes."

"Your husband was a patrolman in the City of Wellsville?"

"He was." "He was a fireman and was later put on the street, just two weeks before this happened."

"Was he an officer May 16, 1926."

"Yes, sir."

"When was the last time you saw your husband?"

"At 11:30 o'clock the night before he died, when he came home for lunch. He remained about half an hour, and left about 12 o'clock. He just took half an hour for lunch that night."

"Was he in uniform?"

"He was."

"What beat did he patrol?"

"Twelfth street to Toronto as we call it."

The defense objected to the latter statement of the witness as it referred to Toronto, and the objection was sustained.

"When did you next see him?"

"When they brought him home in a casket. We then lived at 501 Tenth street.

"Where do you now live?"

"With my mother on Fifteenth street."

"How many children do you have?"

"One four years old and another one year old."

"What do you do now?"

"Run a beauty parlor."

"How old was Mr. Kenney at the time of his death?"

"Twenty-eight."

The witness was not cross-examined.

Zanny Cronin's Testimony.

Defense counsel then asked for a separation of witnesses, but the court was informed by Brookes there were no witnesses for the state in the court room.

Zanny Cronin, residing at Eleventh and White street, Wellsville, was next called by the state. He explained that his residence was a block from Buckeye avenue and two blocks from Thirteenth and Commerce street. He testified that he was in Wellsville the night of May 16 and the morning of May 17.

"Where had you been that night?"

"At Yellow creek, fishing."

"When did you come home?"

"I got at Thirteenth and Commerce street at about 1:45 Sunday morning, May 17. I came up Commerce street to Thirteenth."

"You know Kenney?"

"Yes."

"See Kenney that night or morning?"

"Yes, at Thirteenth and Commerce street."

"Have any conversation with him?"

"Yes."

"Where did you go then?"

"Crossed Thirteenth street at the vacant lot."

Judge Thomas then left the bench and took a place back of the jury box and watched the witness explain certain locations on the map then spread before the jury.

Cronin explained where he stood at Thirteenth and Commerce street.

"Where did you go then?"

"Walked toward Brick alley and Commerce street."

Testifies He Saw Defendant.

"You know the defendant, Nick Scaccutto?"

"Yes, sir."

"See him that night?"

"Yes."

"Speak to him?"

"Yes."

"Did he answer you?"

"If he did, it was in his own tongue."

"Was he alone?"

"No. He was with a short man with a black moustache."

"Where did they go?"

"Got to Commerce street."

"Hear any shots?"

"When I crossed at the pottery I heard shots."

"When I crossed at the pottery I heard shots."

"How many?"

"About eight loud ones and about five weaker shots."

"Hear any before that time?"

"No, sir."

"How long before that did you see Nick?"

"Four or five minutes."

"Hear any more shots after that?"

"No, sir."

"How long have you known Nick?"

"About two years."

"Where did you see him that night?"

"On Commerce street near 'Butch's' place."

"Ever see him any place else?"

"Yes, on Third street, about three or four doors from Main."

"Know where Rocco Carbicella's place is?"

"Yes."

"Was it around Rocco's that you saw Nick?"

"Yes, close to his building, in front."

"That's all, Mr. Cronin."

Admits He Visited Jail.

Attorney Moore then took the witness for cross-examination.

"You say you knew Nick for about two years?"

"About that."

"See him that night?"

"Yes, at Brick alley and Anderson avenue."

"A short man with a black mustach with him?"

"Yes, sir."

"You at the county jail to see him?"

"Not to see him," referring to the defendant.

"What was you there for?"

"To see another man."

"You saw Nick on Thirteenth street?"

"Yes, when I was talking with Kenney."

"What did you go to the jail for?"

"To be certain if he was the man."

"You've testified who was with him?"

"Yes, sir."

"Joe Fusco was pointed out to you as the man who was with Nick?"

"No, sir."

Moore then read from the testimony given before the probate court when application for bail was being heard for the release of Fusco from the county jail on bond. The witness admitted that he had testified as had been read from the record.

"Talk with any one about this case?"

"Only to the Mayor and Chief Fultz."

"Talk today with any one about the case?"

"No, sir."

"Where do you work?"

"At Laughin's in East End."

"How long?"

"About three years."

"You were fishing that night?"

"Yes, alone."

"At Yellow Creek?"

"Yes, sir."

"State whether or not to your knowledge you ever saw the man who was with Nick that night?" Brookes asked in direct examination.

"No."

"You were asked to look at people at the jail to see if any one of them was the one with Nick that night?"

"One of the deputies took me to see if he was the man."

"That's all," Brookes said.

Burns Saw Man in Yard.

The last witness to take the stand Tuesday afternoon was Richard Burns, who formerly resided at Thirteenth and Commerce street, opposite the residence of Frank Fusco, but who has since removed his family to Jefferson county.

Burns described the two-story frame, unpainted residence he formerly occupied, and that he recalled the night that Patrolman Kenney was killed.

"Hear any shooting?" the state asked.

"Yes."

"Tell the jury what you heard."

"Between 2 and 2:30 o'clock the morning of May 17, last, I heard shots. I was asleep, and they awakened me. I leaned over the bed and raised the window, looked out and counted in the neighborhood of eight shots. I soon saw a man come through a yard into Brick alley."

The witness was then asked to point out to the jury on the map the locations he had referred to in seeing the man. He described the location on the map with reference to his home and the alley he saw the man emerge from.

"When the man got to Thirteenth street his left leg gave way on him," the witness went on to relate, and he went to the front gate of the Fusco home. He pounded a minute or so. I then heard glass break. There was an electric light at the corner of Thirteenth and Brick alley.

Points to Scaccuto.

"What kind of a view did you have that night?"

"A clear view."

"You see the man in the court room that you saw go across the lot that night?"

The witness pointed to the defendant.

"Know his name?"

"No, sir."

"How was he walking?"

"His left foot was just balancing him."

"Where was you located that night?"

"I was lying in bed, and I raised the window and looked out."

"How was the man dressed?"

"Light cap and dark coat. I don't know about the pants."

"Have you any difficulty in hearing," the court asked H. B. Dowart, the thirteenth juror sitting in the case. The juror early explained to the court that at times he could not hear well, and he was given the first seat opposite the witness box.

"Hearing perfectly," was his reply.

"Then we're getting along pretty good," the court said with a smile.

"How many shots did you hear that night?" asked Attorney George Farrell on cross-examination.

"I counted eight."

"You got up after the first shot was fired, or after you had counted eight?"

"I didn't get up—laid across the bed and raised the window."

"How long was that?"

"Heard the first shots."

"How long after that before you saw a man come from the back gate?"

"Three minutes at the longest."

"You say he went back?"

"He hesitated, and then came back."

"How long was that?"

"Not over two minutes I'd say."

"Then he came out and went to Fusco's, as you say?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long was it before the man came out of the alley?"

"Not more than three minutes."

"Hear any other shots that night?" asked Assistant Prosecutor Bauknecht.

"No, sir."

"Hear an automobile in that vicinity at the time of the shots?"

"No, I didn't."

"At no time?"

"I heard machines about five minutes later or longer."

Zanny Cronin was then recalled to the witness stand by Brookes.

"Did you note how Nick was dressed that night?"

"Dark suit and light cap."

"The matters you have testified to occurred in the city of Wellsville, county of Columbiana and state of Ohio?"

"Yes, sir."

Court then adjourned until Wednesday morning.

SOLONS VOTE $12,500 FIRE TRUCK BONDS

Legislation Enacted at Wellsville Council Meeting.

Necessity of Siren Discussed by Members and Ashley.

Legislation authorizing the issuance of $12,500 worth of bonds for the purchase of a Seagraves fire truck and pumper, was enacted last night by city council under emergency rules. The bonds will be in effect for 10 years at five per cent interest rate.

Following the fire truck legislation, President Baker referred to the necessity of a siren and explained the action of one now in use at Stop 55, north of East Liverpool. A siren of this kind, he said, would cost $390.

Although Safety Director George Ashley agreed that the siren probably was a good one, he, together with other council members, also pointed out that the city had no money, after buying the truck, to get one.

It will be necessary, the director explained, to pay for 1,000 feet of new fire hose, too.

Property owners who have holdings jutting out into Beech street will be notified by the city to remove them from the street as a result of council action. Councilman Connor introduced a deed, dated in 1893, to show that Beech street was at that time and has been since then, an open street.

Standard Oil company was granted permission to lay a three-inch pipe line to their lot at Third and Lisbon streets in an ordinance passed by council. A similar right also was extended to Thomas Hibbins who will lay pipe lines from the railroad switch to a piece of ground just east of the Little Yellow creek street car bridge and opposite the mill playground.

Solons transferred $750 from the safety to the general fund for current expenses, by resolution. An ordinance also was adopted providing supplementary appropriations for the safety fund, fire station, $50; service fund, garbage disposal, $100, and water fund, supply and maintenance, $500.

The Ohio Power company will be instructed to light 26 more white way lamps as a result of recommendations of the street and light committee which recently completed a survey of white way needs.

City Auditor Eckfeld's report follows:

General fund, $247.87; safety, $1,670.51; health, $605.59; service, $3,257.26; water, $3,096.59; cemetery, $2,057.32; library, $299.07; special water, $29,954.62; gasoline tax, $4,190.13; auto license, $2,846.42; cemetery trust, $542.82; firemen's indemnity, $350.06; sinking fund, $58,970.97.

December Income Tax Collections Hit Record Mark

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—December income tax collections have far exceeded expectations and will be the largest last quarter payments in the last five years. The treasury announced today, collections up to Saturday were $303,575,000, about $45,000,000 ahead of last year. The total will equal the September collection of $442,000,000, officials said.

Collections for the year are $921,185,000, or $164,000,000 ahead of last year.

The present surplus is $70,000,000 ahead of last year, which indicates, officials said, that the year's surplus would be about $500,000,000.

FRANCE ALL SET TO STAND PAT ON WAR DEBT

Parliament Will Refuse to Ratify Pact by Berenger.

OUTLINES VIEW

Moderates Claim Action Will Not Hurt Franc.

PARIS.—The French Parliament will never ratify the Mellon-Berenger debt accord as it now stands. France will lose nothing by refusing to ratify the agreement.

Those are the opinions of Deputy Adrien Dariac, one of the so-called "moderate" members of the French Chamber of Deputies. His views are important because they will probably influence the Chamber sub-commission on debts, over which he presides, when the sub-commission reports to the Chamber Financial Commission the advisable course of action to adopt with regard to both the American and British debts.

"I do not believe failure to ratify the Washington agreement will cause a renewed fall of the franc" Deputy Dariac declared in an exclusive interview with International News Service. "Don't forget that during the Caillaux negotiations in Washington the fall of the franc was more rapid than before.

"Did the signature of the Mellon-Berenger accord provoke an irresistable increase in the value of the franc? It most certainly did not.

Never Denied Debts.

"France has never denied her debts, nor will she ever deny them. She wants to pay. But what is the amount of the American debt exactly?"

Asked if he did not believe that the Mellon-Berenger accord settled that point, M. Dariac replied:

"I agree that we were granted appreciable reductions, but there is no doubt that the amount decided upon for payment is still too high. Furthermore can France compromise her financial situation irrevocably by agreeing to pay such large annuities, unless safety and transfer clauses minimize the risks?

"How could America treat her old associate, France, so harshly, after France made such enormous sacrifices for the common victory; after France, instead of defaulting Germany made financial sacrifices to restore the devastated regions, when the treaty gave an incontestable priority on this point?

"On recommendation of our own creditors did we not grant to Germany a reduction of our claims on her, including safety and transfer clauses, preventing uncomfortable surprises for Germany in making her regular Dawes plan payments?

"From the French point of view we have nothing to lose in trying to mark time. The Mellon-Berenger accord, drawn up to precipitately, satisfies one in France.

"I do not hesitate to say that the government would be taking grave risks in asking the immediate ratification of the Washington accord, even preceded by the reservations to which M. Ponicare has referred many times."

Reservations Useless.

M. Dariac admitted that such reservations, being unilateral, would have no value, binding only France.

"Then what is the solution?" the correspondent asked M. Dariac.

"There is only one," he replied. "Revision!"

M. Dariac repeated a suggestion made recently by himself in a speech in his constituency, that the entire question of debts be turned over to the League of Nations or the Court of International Justice and Arbitration at The Hague.

"I see no objection to making reparations an international question," he declared, "especially if it will lead to eventual annulation of both debts and reparations. In that way a permanent factor of discord would disappear, peace would be assured, the work of Locarno consolidated and the hopes of Thoiry made realizeable."

Delaying debt ratification cannot inconvenience the United States, M. Dariac believes.

Makes Haste Slowly.

"The United State has nothing to lose," he said. "France has the firm desire to pay what she owes, but only what she owes and under conditions that do not ruin her. She therefore has a perfect right to demand an equitable revision of the accords already signed.

M. Poincare did tell M. Henry Simon, president of the Chamber of finane commission, that he would demand ratification of the debt agreements before the end of the year.

"Immediately from all corners of France came vehement protests. The protest of war veterans made a big impression upon M. Poincare. Today he looks at the matter differently.

" In such matters it does not pay to work fast. I believe England, Italy and Belgium made big mistakes in ratifying their agreements so quickly. "It is better to make haste slowly."

Proposal Launched To Create Corps of Dominion Guards

LONDON.—A proposal is afoot to create a Corps of Dominions Guards in Britain to take their place alongside the other Guards' regiments.

The idea is for this special unit to be formed on the lines of the Brigade of Guards, with men from each Dominion and Protectorate in the British Empire to take part.

Each unit would be officered by men from the Dominion it represented, and its cost would be borne by the Treasury of its country.

Central headquarters would be in London, but sections of the corps would be periodically assigned to duties in various parts of the Empire.

Such a force, it is stated, would be a very valuable nucleus of a large overseas contingent in case of emergency.

U. S. DRY FORCES RAID 58 NIGHT CLUBS AND CABARETS

YULE SEASON GAYETY HIT IN RUM CLEAN-UP

Seven Squads Co-operate in New York City Offensive.

PADLOCK DOORS

Agents Posing as "Butter and Egg Men," Get Evidence.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.— United States prohibition forces, on the very eve of the holiday season of gayety, struck their hardest blow against New York's night life early today.

Seven parties made up of assistant United States attorneys, policemen, federal prohibition agents and deputy United States marshals, all acting under direction of United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner, served personal injunctions and bills of complaint in padlock proceedings on 58 of the city's best known life clubs, cabarets and restaurants.

The raids followed an investigation of three months carried out by agents posing as "rich butter and egg men" and distinguished visitors from abroad. Directed by Major Chester P. Mills, of the prohibition enforcement branch, the agents ingratiated themselves by the lavish use of money and easily gained all the evidence they needed to start proceedings against many night clubs and cabarets in and on the fringe of the bright light district.

Well Known Clubs Visited.

Places visited included such well known clubs as Texas Guinan's 300 club, the Club Dover, Helen Morgan's Fifty-Fourth street club, the Cafe de Paris, Dinty Moore's club, the Club Anatole, the Palladium club, the Club Richman, Barney's, Del Fay club, Mort's restaurant, Texas Tommy Guinan's Playground, the Embassy club, the Club Biarritz and the Hawaiian club.

The raiders set out at 10 o'clock last night and at dawn today they were still busy. Prohibition officials described the offensive as "a complete success" and predicted that this would be the dryest Christmas and New Year's New York has known since prohibition went into effect.

It was declared that the bills of complaint would make the owners of the club liable to arrest if they attempted to disregard the padlock proceedings and start up in business again.

Crowds of men and women in evening dress who were dancing, dining and perhaps drinking in the fashionable night clubs, watched the proceedings. There were cries of anger and dismay as the revelry was halted in some of the places.

Theft of Copper Wire Delays All Erie Road Trains

CLEVELAND, Dec. 22.—Thieves who stole nearly 50,000 feet of copper wire, connecting telegraph and signal systems, caused delay of several hours to all Erie railroad trains out of here today.

Interruptions to the wires caused signal lights to show danger signals, preventing the trains from moving.

3 a. m. The doctor there lanced my finger and gave me some sleeping pills. I went back home early in the morning of July 9th and went to bed."

"Did you ever know this man McDermott?"

"No."

"Did you ever see him in your store?"

"No."

Accounts for Night of Murder.

Then Rudner accounted for July 15th, the night of the murder, and for July 26th, the date the prosecution charges McDermott telephoned Rudner in Massillon from Akron and later visited Rudner to get "paid off."

Rudner testified he was away on an automobile ride to Brewster on July 26. He told of a visit on July 15th to Canton police headquarters to complain to S. A. Lengel, police chief, concerning some windows being broken in his store.

He drove to Massillon and "met a lady friend of mine," Rudner testified.

"It was about 10:30 p. m., and we went to a party at Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fessler's. I stayed there until 12:30 midnight. Then with four others we drove from Canton to Akron to Massillon, picked up another young lady in Massillon and went back to Canton for something to eat in a restaurant."

When he got back to Massillon at about 4:30 a. m., the witness said he met Policeman J. W. Smith, who told him "a murder has been committed over in Canton."

"I drove right back to Canton and talked with the boys in police headquarters," Rudner said.

Former Policeman Testifies.

As Floyd Streitenberger, former Canton policeman, now living in Fairfield, Ohio, resumed the witness stand today, Prosecutor McClintock attempted to cross-examine him regarding a purported newspaper interview in Buffalo, quoting him as saying he could furnish an alibi for Louis Mazer.

The court ruled out questions along these lines.

"Did Mazer have a gun when he visited you?"

"No," the witness answered.

Frank J. Hartman, lawyer, of Evansburg, Pa., who represented the McDermott family in the negotiations for the surrender of Pat was the next witness. He gave his testimony in a whisper to the court stenographer for the record, the judge not permitting the recital to be heard by the jury.

Kascholk's Wife on Stand.

Mrs. Steve Kascholk, wife of the state's star witness, then took the stand as a defense witness to impeach her husband's testimony. She said she had lived with Kascholk for three months in Nanty Glo, Pa., and said that he deserted her child.

"What did Steve do in Nanty Glo?"

"He didn't do anything."

"Have you ever seen Pat McDermott before?"

"No."

J. H. Stevens, another witness, testified that while in the workhouse he talked with Kascholk about the Mellett case.

"Steve said he didn't know anything about the murder but he was trying to get some dough out of it," the witness testified.

Kascholk furnished the state with incriminating testimony against McDermott, testifying that he and McDermott looked over the Mellett home but that he (Kascholk) was afraid of the "job" and left town.

Prosecution Charges "Frame-up."

The spirit of Christmastide is obviously lacking in the attitude of opposing counsel. Defense counsel had charged in open court that the prosecution is attempting "to frame McDermott in order to satisfy the public hue and cry and because of political ambitions."

The defense entered on the record the allegations that the prosecution promised McDermott he would "be turned out on the bricks" if he would surrender and tell all he knew; that they "didn't care about anything but 'getting Rudner,'" and that McDermott after he surrendered declared he "had nothing to confess."

Prosecutor C. B. McClintock denied he made any trade with the defendant or his relatives other than to promise him "a square deal."

Speaker Denies Charge

penny on that or any other game and was entirely ignorant of any bets being made until, as I said before, in June. It seems strange the powers-that-be of baseball should take the work of a man of Leonard's calibre when my name does not appear in the case.

"I have been told when Leonard was waived out of the American League that he made the statement that I was a fine kind of a friend to have and that he would 'get me.' I must say he took a fine way to make good on his threat. He should have taken into consideration that I was only the manager, not the owner of a ball club, and that I had an obligation to my employer, the late James C. Dunn, to protect his interests by not adding a man to the club roster whom I knew in my heart had run his race as a major league pitcher.

Trying Ordeal, Says Tris.

"It has been a terrible strain and trying ordeal for me but there is real satisfaction in knowing that my name is not connected with the case in any manner except by word of mouth of a veritable Judas. I feel confident the day will come when Leonard, if he has a spark of manhood in him, will agree to appear before Landis and clear my name. I am absolutely guiltless.

"In conclusion I want to say that the testimony together with the explanation given by both Wood and Cobb proves there was no thought of wrong-doing on the part of either man. And there is absolutely nothing to show the ball game was fixed."

TWO DEAD AS KENTUCKY IS HIT BY FLOOD

Lowlands Along Two Rivers are Completely Under Water.

BOAT CAPSIZES

No Danger Along Ohio Valley, Says Observer.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 22. — Two were dead today in the van of one of the most disastrous floods in the history of the lowlands along the Kentucky and Cumberland rivers.

A. D. Howard, merchant, and Calvin Goings, farmer, were drowned when the boat in which they and Herschel Goings and Huston Cuzick were crossing the Kentucky river capsized against driftwood.

Lowlands in seven counties are completely under water and two counties are cut off from the outside world, as a result of the heavy rains of the past several days.

Water near Corbin was four feet above the highway and travel was at a standstill. Many Corbin families were forced to flee from their homes.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 22.—Although rivers in Kentucky, West Virginia and Tennessee are expected to pass the flood stage by tonight, the Ohio River wil be able to absorb the overflow without serious flood menace to the Ohio valley in general, U. S. Weather Observer W. C. Deveraux said today in quieting current rumors that a serious flood was in view.

The Ohio river is expected to reach a stage of 18 or 20 feet in East Liverpool early Friday, according to employes at U. S. dam No. 8. The river was reported to be rising at noon today when the 11-foot mark was registered. No flood stage is expected here.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 22.—Elmer G. Myers, the losing pitcher in the now famous game between Detroit and Cleveland, played on September 25, 1919, declared today that it was only an ordinary game to him, and that if it was "fixed" he knew nothing about it.

"Speaker never gave me any instructions as to how to pitch that game," said Myers. "I pitched to win."

The Tigers pounded Myers for 18 hits and won the game, 9 to 5. Myers, who makes his home here and last season was a member of the Orioles, also declared he knew nothing of any betting on the game.

Winning Pitcher's Statement.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 22.—Bernie Boland, who pitched the fateful game of Sept. 25, 1919, for the Detroit Tigers and who now is a cement contractor in this city, having given up baseball several years ago, today declared that he knew nothing out of the way in the game in question.

Asked if he were aware that the game was "thrown," Bernie said:

"So far as I know everything was O. K. on this game. I was given the pitching assignment in a regular way and went out to win it. The statement of Landis was the first I ever heard of anything crooked connected with the game.

"I have not been questioned by anyone regarding the game and it's hard to believe that Cobb was a party to anything of this sort."

Ban Johnson's Statement.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—"The American league always has been able to lay a heavy hand upon those in its ranks who do not behave."

This was the opening shot in a statement issued today by B. B. Johnson, president of the American league concerning the diamond's new baseball scandal.

Johnson is credited in some quarters with instigating the entire investigation which involved Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker.

The American league boss expressed sympathy for Speaker's 82-year-old mother.

"I am saddened to think she will be forced to bear the thought of this to her grave," he said. "Ty Cobb has a large family. Joe Wood has two boys in school in the east. It is too bad that these innocent persons must bear the brunt of the scandal."

Johnson said he "regretted" the occurence more than he could "express."

men. He testified he retired about 2:15 a. m., and that he heard reports from guns and that as he looked at the clock he heard other shots. Then he got up and went down the street. He then came back and called the fire station. He testified that he went to the Maggio house and saw the body of Patrolman Kenney lying in the front yard between the walk and the fence near a flower pot. He also said he saw the tracks of women's shoes on the ground.

Under cross examination by Attorney George T. Farrell, Morgan testified he heard 10 or 12 shots, five of which were in quick succession. Farrell then asked the witness to tap on the witness box about how fast these shots were fired and the witness did as directed.

He went on to relate that he had seen the Carbicella automobile many times before.

Frank Fusco's Testimony.

Frank Fusco, under direct examination by Prosecutor Brookes, testified he lived in 13th street, that he was home the night Patrolman Kenney was shot, that Scaccuto formerly boarded with them and that he had known Nick for several years.

At this point of the testimony Bennie Pepe, who was sitting at the defense counsel table, was sworn as an interpreter by Judge Thomas and quetions and answers were given the jury through him. Fusco, continuing, said that he was in bed when Scaccuto called him, that Nick got into their house by breaking a window and that Scaccuto was in bed when he first saw him.

Fusco testified that when he began to talk to Scaccuto, the defendant told him to let him sleep and he did not say how he was wounded. Fusco said Nick told him he would pay for the window he broke. Fusco said he did not hear any shots.

When cross examined by Attorney James E. O'Grady, Fusco testified that Scaccuto had boarded with them for about three months but this was five or six months before Kenney was shot.

Fred L. Herline is Witness.

Fred L. Herline, under direct examination by Assistant Prosecutor Bauknecht, testified he was standing in front of the Wellsville city hall the night Kenney was killed and that he had heard a number of shots. He said that he and Oyster went down Main street toward Thirteenth and that they met a car between Ninth and Tenth streets, finished in dull red and having disk wheels. He said that Rocco Carbicella was in the front seat. The witness also said he visited the murder scene and described conditions in the front yard where the body was found. Kenney was lying on his left side with his face on the ground, he testified.

He said he found a .38 caliber bullet near a flower vase which had been upset and that Sheriff Wright found a chip off another hullet. He testified that the ground looked as if there had been some scuffling. He also said he found a guitar in the yard, near the east fence.

The witness, cross-examined by Attorney Moore, testified that he went to the Maggio home alone and told of the crowds gathering about the front yard.

Mrs. Wilda McIntyre, under direct examination by Prosecutor Brookes, testified that she had walked over to the Maggio home after the shooting and that she saw Kenney lying on the ground and that she heard him draw two or three breaths. She said she was there when Patrolman Barnes arrived and that there was no one there when she reached the scene.

The witness was not cross examined.

Edward Pugh Questioned.

Edward Pugh was examined by Prosecutor Brookes. He said he was on duty at Fifth and Main streets when the shooting occurred and that he had called Oyster and Herline to find where the shots came from. He testified he saw Carbicella drive up Main street in his own car and when the witness went to the Maggio home shortly before 3 o'clock the body of Kenney was still in the yard.

Pugh swore that a revolver (state's exhibit No. 3) a .38 caliber weapon, was found in Kenney's hand when he arrived at the Maggio home. He said he didn't examine it. He testified Mayor Fogo took the revolver out of Kenney's hand but the witness did not examine the revolver.

Soon after he arrived at the Maggio home, the witness said, they brought in a couple of stills from houses between Eleventh and Twelfth street in Commerce.

He said he was in Fusco's home when they had finished dressing Scaccuto's wounds.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Farrell, Pugh said he was at the Fusco home about an hour.

Traced Drops of Blood.

Thomas Madden, 1017 Center street, in direct examination by Bauknecht, testified of being at the Fusco home with the mayor and policemen and that they traced drops of blood into the Fusco yard and saw a broken window.

The witness testified they went upstairs and saw Scaccuto in bed with one foot lying over another and that his leg was bandaged.

Madden testified that the defendant, when he saw him in the Fusco home, looked like a colored man, but that the nurses cleaned him up at the hospital.

Mayor Fogo, when examined by Prosecutor Brookes, testified that Officer Barnes came to his home at 2:30 o'clock the morning of May 17. Fogo said he went to the Maggio home and saw the body of Patrolman Kenney lying between a flower vase and a fence. He said Kenney had a uniform on, that he turned the body over, and took a revolver from the patrolman's hand. The witness identified the revolver.

He said that all the shells in the gun had been exploded.

A pair of blue trousers, worn by Kenney the night he was killed, was then shown the witness. The bullet holes in the cloth and the blood stains were identified as those observed after Kenney had been disrobed.

Mayor Fogo also said that he had visited the Fusco home, saw Scaccuto in bed with his leg bandaged, and a pair of scissors lying on the bed near him. The wounds, the witness said, were in the left leg.

Fogo testified that he said "Hello, Nick, how did this happen?" and that Scaccuto replied, "I was walking on the street and someone shot."

The witness said the defendant could not talk good.

The efficiency of Patrolman Kenney was praised by the witness.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Moore, the mayor testified there was dark and light lint on the fence near where the body of Kenney was found.

Acting Chief's Story.

Arthur Newton, acting chief of police, was examined by Prosecutor Brookes. He told of the time of death of Kenney and of going to the Maggio home shortly afterwards and that later he went to the Fusco home when he placed Scaccuto under arrest. Officer Barnes went to the Fusco home with him. He testified he saw Scaccuto in bed and that after he had examined him he had placed him under arrest. Newton testified that Scaccuto said to him, "I got shot on the street," and that the defendant "didn't say anything else" to him at the house. He said Dr. McCulloch dressed the wound and that when Newton asked Scaccuto why he didn't report the shooting that Scaccuto refused to answer him.

State exhibits 6 and 7 were identified by the witness as bullets found near the place.

Newton testified that Scaccuto had been around the Carbicella store, and that Scaccuto told him he was running the store. He also told of locating the Carbicella car in the garage of his father-in-law. He also said that Scaccuto has been arrested for violating the liquor law and that the charge against him was dismissed by Mayor Fogo for lack of evidence.

Charles Montgomery said he was in the East Liverpool hospital when J. H. Fultz asked Scaccuto "which way he ran when he shot Kenney," and that Scaccuto said, "Up the street."

Under cross-examination by Attorney Moore, Montgomery said that Fultz asked him to go to the hospital with him and that while in the emergency room Scaccuto seemed to be suffering and talked in broken language.

Father Finds Girl After She Spends Night on Porch

A 15-hour search for Doris Mountford, 8, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mountford, 1009 Riverview street, ended shortly after 8 o'clock this morning when the child was found by her father on Bank street.

When the girl who attends the McKinley school failed to return to her home last evening, her father combed the hillside in the vicinity of Beechwood and the Northside.

She said that she had stayed in a Northside store until the proprietor closed the place last evening and spent the remainder of the night on the front porch of a McKinnon avenue residence, fearing to return home.

Mountford located the child as she was on her way to school.

BANKER FOILS HOLD-UP MAN

Frustrates Columbus Robbery Attempt by Quick Thinking.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 22.—Teller J. J. Brown, of the City National bank, today frustrated a bandit's attempt to rob him of $1,000 by thinking an instant faster than the man behind the gun.

While scores of clerks and customers hurried about the unmasked man approached Brown's cage and passed the teller a note. Under his arm he carried a folded newspaper.

"Hand me $1,000 in big bills, I shoot straight O. K.," read the greasy folded paper.

Brown looked up and into the shining muzzle of a gun.

"I'll have to get it for you," countered Brown, sparring for time.

"Don't stall, Buddy," snarled the young robber. "I'll count three before I shoot."

The bandit opened his lips to count when Brown dropped beneath the marble counter of his cage, and yelled for help, frightening the gunman who fled, brandishing his weapon.

Christmas shoppers made way for the man as he fled into an alley.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKETS

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—With the exception of the motor stocks and a few of the specialties, prices of active stocks were slightly lower in early trading today. The market was still under the influence of profit taking and professional selling, based on the tigher money situation and the prospect of a withdrawal of outside traders over the holidays.

A few additions were made to the list of corporations revising their dividends upward. Julius Kayser went on a $4 dividend basis as forecasted and the stock was in active demand. Better reports were sent in from the motor car manufacturing centers where good accumulations of orders for January were reported. The 5½ per cent call loan rate was posted and there is little hope that the rate will come down until the first week in January.

Hudson was a leader in the motor group, advancing in active trading to a new high on the move at 49 5-8; Nash gained a point at 67 1-2, while Studebaker, General Motors and White Motors were fractionally higher. The move in the low priced rubber stocks gained some headway, Hough Ajax declined fractionally to 9½ on announcement of the proposed offering of new stock at 10.

Commodity markets were also dull and irregular, with cotton at a slightly higher price range and grain prices lower.

Harry Heilmann Responsible For Expose of "Thrown" Game

Compelled Leonard To Tell His Story To Detroit Owner

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Harry Heilmann, who is not a league executive, under oath to preserve honesty, nor a $65,000 commissioner who is committed to the same purpose nor yet a disgruntled conspirator but just a man in the rank trying to conduct himself in a manner consistent with his honor, is the individual who forced baseball's latest scandal to a showdown.

John J. McGraw vouchsafed this information to the writer today in proof of his sincere belief that the game was and is fundamental honest. McGraw would allow no other construction to be placed upon baseball's position, in spite of the sensational disclosures involving Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, hallowed idols of young America, and Joe Wood, and "Dutch" Leonard, first class pitchers in their day.

It was Leonard's confession that brought the expose into the light today but behind that confession is the story of a man who held honor and the good name of his profession above friendship. The man who took his unassailable position in the face of the tragic consequences he knew must be suffered by two of baseball's great stars was Harry Heilmann, according to McGraw's statement.

The story, as McGraw tells it, runs something like this:

Leonard, either in a spirit of bravado or beset by the qualms of conscience, confided in Heilmann the details of the conspiracy hereby the players named were to clean up on the game of September 25, 1919.

"All right," said Heilmann very earnestly. "Now, I'll tell you one. You are to bring that story before Frank Navin not later than 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. I'd advise you to do this because I will be there at 10:10 and what he doesn't know by that time, he will know in five minutes."

Leonard, it seems, took the hint. It also would seem that he took $20,000 for his trouble but neither McGraw nor baseball in general in concerned with that.

What McGraw, who has seen his own men "go wrong" not once but several times, would like to emphasize, is that baseball is proving its honesty by exposing its conspirators as fast as they bob up, regardless of their importance.

"Even the finest garden must have its occasional weed," is the way McGraw sizes up the situation.

"But a good gardener will rout out the weeds as fast as they push their heads into the open and that is exactly what baseball is doing."

"But first you must have proof that they are actually weeds. I sat on my own bench and writhed in mental agony as I watched Zimmerman and Chase do things that I knew were wrong. But I lacked proof of their dishonesty and both my hands and tongue were tied.

"I couldn't have shouted mere suspicions from the house tops, could I? If I did, they would have had me in court on libel proceedings and probably they would have collected, too. But as soon as we had definite proof, we acted.

"The Dolan-O'Connell case was just a deplorable faux pas by a couple of men who didn't know any better.

"It may be a bromide but I wish to state my sincere conviction that these exposes prove baseball to be really honest. No man is big enough to be whitewashed and no man will be.

"This looks bad now but don't forget it happened back before the White Sox scandal and before the Dolan-O'Connell business. The fearless way in which we prosecuted these cases leaves no doubt at this time as to the fate that awaits men who stray off the reservation. Before 1919, scandals were unknown. Today, every ball player in the land realizes just where a misstep will carry him. I think you have witnessed your last baseball conspiracy."

Football Annual Covers Eastern Ohio Athletics

"The Intersectional Football Annual of 1926," an attractively made record of scholastic football in eastern Ohio, magazine size, published by the Salem Hi-Y club, is being distributed here through the East Liverpool Hi-Y club and elsewhere in sections that have been "covered" by the sponsors.

The football annual is making its first appearance. If possible, it will be a yearly post-season feature, according to Robert Garrison, of Salem, the managing editor.

The annual contains articles on scholastic football by coaches of this county, Struthers, Alliance and other football centers, as well as football discussions by county sporting writers and others interested in the welfare of school athletics.

Dick Larkins, of the local Hi-Y organization, is in charge of the distribution here.

Fast Work.

Madison Square Garden was cleared of the bicycle track in exactly one hour and a half at the close of the 6-day race in order to prepare the arena for ice hockey, a match being scheduled for the next day, between the New York Rangers and the Boston Bruins.

MAY ASK COURT TO STOP TRADE

Stockholder Hints Legal Action in Hornsby Deal.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 22.—Suggestion that legal action may be taken in an effort to block consummation of the deal which sends Rogers Hornsby to the New York Giants, was seen here today in a statement made by Mark C. Steinberg, a member of the St. Louis Cardinals' board of directors. The trade was made by Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis National league club.

"Breadon did not consult the stockholders or board of directors when he put through this deal," Steinberg declared, "and in trading Hornsby, who is second largest stockholder of the club, Breadon has deprived the Cardinals of one of their principal assets.

"This naturally depreciates the value of stock in the club.

"Hornsby's lawyer is going to look up some points to find out whether or not Breadon, under the club's charter, has the right to transact business in this fashion. It may be possible to have the deal declared off through legal action. This of course we doubt, but there may be some lively action stirring around here yet."

President Breadon, however, seemed not in the least disturbed. He said:

"I expected to be criticized by some. But those who have criticized most might be a bit surprised to learn that I have been besieged all day with telephone calls, congratulating me on my judgment in parting with Hornsby for Frisch and Ring. I am not at all sorry I made the move."

"I'm a member of the Giants and I don't see where things can be altered," the former Cardinal leader said. "If I can reach an agreement with Breadon, I'll arrange to get rid of my stock in the club."

(Hornsby is the second largest stockholder in the Cardinals, owning 1,167 shares for which he paid slightly more than $50,000.)

Breadon, likewise, said the matter was settled beyond all recall; that the papers had been signed and were passing through the mails to and from New York.

"The deal was made with Charles Stoneham, president of the Giants, Monday night and it was a straight business transaction," Breadon said. "There was no chance to come to terms with Hornsby. There is no undoing of my transaction."

A new indoor sport has been introduced in Hollywood's film colony, in which pool is played in a pool, the balls being made of a substance that floats. Nets are placed at the corners and the players are clothed in swimming suits.

"Can't Two Birds Meet Without Pulling Trade?" Queries This Pair

If you're a baseball man you can't even ask another baseball man for a light these days without being interviewed on the matter of possible trades. For with seven new big league pilots out to shape their clubs this is the busiest stove league session in years. Here we have Walter McNicols, secretary and business manager of the Cleveland Indians and President Barnard's chief aide (at left), halted during a chat with Miller Huggins, Yankee manager, right, to deny they are about to trade Babe Ruth and a few other Yanks for George Uhle, Joe Sewell and a half dozen other Indians or what have you.

Maloney-Persson To Clash in Heavy Elimination Bout

By George Barry.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Another so-called logical contender will be eliminated tonight at Madison Square Garden as a result of the ten round bout between Jimmy Maloney, of Boston, and Harry Persson, champion of Sweden, in the second of two heavyweight shows held this week for the benefit of the local Christmas fund. A bout between the winner and Jack Delaney, who knocked out Bud Gorman on Monday, is a possibility.

Maloney generally was favored today as the winner, largely because of his sensational knockout of Arthur De Kuh and Persson's recent defeat by Pat McCarthy. However, the Swede was a hot tip to win in some quarters and the short-enders were taking all they could get on Persson at 5 to 8.

The ten round distance was regarded as favorable to both of the principals because of their tendency to blow up during the latter stages of their fights. There was little betting on the prospect of a knockout and what there was favored Maloney.

With Good Name of Baseball At Stake Landis Tosses Bomb

Name and Fame of Speaker and Cobb Not Great Enough to Save Them When Commissioner Thought Pitiless Publicity Necessary.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—"The good name of baseball was at stake." And so Kenesaw M. Landis, high commissioner, was willing to light and toss the bomb which has rocked the game with its third great scandal and blotted the escutcheon of four of its one-time famous players, two of them among the greatest figures that ever pranced upon a diamond.

The name and fame of Tyrus Raymond Cobb and Tristram Speaker were not great enough to save them when he thought that the good of the game demanded pitiless publicity for them because the finger of suspicion had pointed toward them.

In the eyes of Kenesaw M. Landis, anything is justified that will keep the name of baseball clean.

"His Hardest Job."

"By George, that was the hardest job I ever faced," he said, referring to the hundred pages of typewritten testimony which he made public late yesterday, "but the good name of baseball was at stake and I thought I owed it to the public to give it the facts."

Those few words constitute the sole break in the sphinx-like silence in which he withdrew himself after clothing with facts the skeleton rumors that have been tossed around in virtually all baseball circles since Cobb and Speaker suddenly resigned their managerships at Detroit and Cleveland this fall on excuses that, if they were not lame, at least limped.

Only Excuses.

Those excuses—that Cobb was tired of the game in which he shone for a score of years and that Speaker's legs had gone back on him—are now shown just that—excuses. It is shown that their resignations were turned in just when the investigation which culminated in the present expose was at it's height.

Whether the squire, as Landis is somewhat affectionately known, believes that a comparatively unimportant game between Cleveland and Detroit in the latter city on September 14, 1919, was won by Cobb, Speaker, Hubert "Dutch" Leonard and "Smoky Joe" Wood under the grand stand before hostilities began on the field, the commissioner refuses to say.

Neither will he say whether he believes that Speaker and Cobb won and wagered upon the game, in which both took part.

Nor does he comment upon Wood's admission that he had Leonard and "a friend of mine not connected with baseball" wager $600 upon the game and took down $420 profit.

Was "Sore" at Cobb.

"It's all in there," he insists, jabbing one lean forefinger at the hundred pages of testimony. "Read their testimony and judge for yourself whether they are innocent or guilty."

"What do you think was Leonard's motive in turning up those letters after saving them all these years?" he was asked.

Landis' eyes twinkled. "I gather he didn't care much for Cobb," he replied laconically.

Now that the first shock of finding two of its greatest idols besmirched is over and that a scrutiny of the evidence neither convicts nor acquits them, several million fans probably are wondering what all the shooting is about.

Ban Johnson Stunned.

Even Ban B. Johnson, president of the American league in which further sordid doings in 1919 are disclosed, was considerably stunned by Landis' action in giving out everything.

"I am dumbfounded. I won't talk about it," he said.

Which seemed to throw cold water on the belief that his recent burying of the hatchet with Landis at the recent joint meeting of the American and National leagues here was for the purpose of presenting a united front when the bomb went off.

Out of the torrent of testimony which poured out of the squire's office yesterday the sequence of events which led to the expose was being picked out today.

Rankled Under "Injustice."

Apparently it would never have come out if, last year, Cobb, having procured Leonard's reinstatement and signed him for Detroit, had not fired him toward the end of last season and waived him out of the big leagues.

Rankling under what his testimony says he believed injustice because he was compelled to pitch out of turn and without proper rest, Leonard sought to force an adjustment of money difficulties with the Detroit club by producing two letters.

One was a letter from Cobb to him which veiled references to "business transactions" and sums of money referring to a bet upon that long since played Cleveland-Detroit game, Leonard said.

The other was a letter from Wood to Leonard in which no ambiguity was attempted and a frank discussion of what money had been wagered and won by the two of them was penned.

Goes To See Leonard.

The Detroit club, Landis says, then informed the executive committee of the American league what Leonard was charging. Soon the letters were in possession of the league. Leonard

He Is "Traded" Only to Remain With Old Team

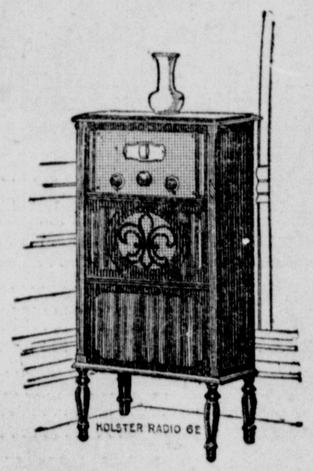

Bill Terry, versatile Giant infielder, is to be traded again, it is said. Terry is the most traded ball player in baseball. He is constantly on the market mainly because he's a utility man, but usually finds himself in the Giant lineup when the trade winds die.

Ohioan is Blinded By Acid; Estranged Wife is Arrested

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 22—Carl Gratziano was in Grant hospital today, with the sight of one of his eyes probably destroyed, physicians said, while his wife, Mrs. Laura Gratziano, 27, was held by police. The woman, it is alleged threw acid in her husband's face at the latter's home here. They had been separated several months. Mrs. Gratziano carried her year-old baby in her arms as she went to her husband's home and threw the acid upon him.

1926 taxes became a lien April 11, 1926, the day preceding the second Monday in April.

First half must be paid not later than December 20th, 1926. Last Half must be paid not later than June 20th, 1927.

The correct way to pay a year's tax without penalty is to pay in December for December and the following June.

Penalty on delinquent Real Estate and Personal Property is 10 per cent.

When writing for a statement of your taxes, remember property appears on the Treasurer's books in the name of the person having title on April 11th, 1926 and that the law requires the Treasurer's books and receipts to be made out in the name of the party owning property when the lien took effect.

In writing for statement of taxes, always send last receipt, or give name of owner in April 1926, stating plainly in what city, town or township located, and whether real or personal property.

When you write for statement or pay by mail, enclose a self addressed stamped envelope for reply.

Examine your receipts and see that they are correct before you leave the Treasurer's Office.

Treasurer's Office will be open from 7 A. M. to 5:00 P. M.

is said to have received $20,000 for them. On September 6, last, they were passed to Landis.

Efforts by the squire to get Leonard to come to Chicago were futile. The former southpaw pitcher made excuses, such as that he was afraid to come to Chicago because "quite often they bump a guy off there." So Landis packed up and went to California, got hold of Leonard and from him obtained the story that he had conspired with Cobb, Speaker and Wood for Detroit to win that ball game in 1919 and that the four of them had wagered upon it and won when Detroit came out on the long end of a 9 to 5 score.

Others Called In.

Then Cobb, Speaker and Wood were called to Chicago, Wood admitted his part in the betting but denied any plot to have the game thrown to Detroit or that Cobb or Speaker were involved in the wagering. The others denied everything except that Cobb admitted that, at Leonard's request, he had asked Wood how much money he had got down and at what odds.

That's all there is to the evidence except that a man named West, employed around the Detroit park, admitted he had placed a bet for Wood and later collected the winnings and turned them over to him.

It's enough, though, the squire insisted, to warrant publicity because "the good name of baseball was at stake."

Today the squire had retired into silence again and the actors in the drama had quit Chicago.

Cobb was speeding back to his Georgia home after an impassioned and at times tearful defense of himself and Speaker.

"We're going out of the game absolutely clean," he declared. "We don't deserve what's been handed us."

Speaker Denies Betting.

His anger seemed particularly directed against President Frank Navin of the Detroit club who, he said, deserted and went back on him without waiting to learn if he could disprove the charges.

Speaker, back in Cleveland, was hotly denying he had bet on "that damned game" and telling what he thought of Leonard, whose grudge against him appeared to be founded on the fact that Speaker d'd not claim him for Cleveland when Cobb asked waivers.

Wood was headed back east, having disappeared as soon as he had made his confession that he had wagered on the game and attempted to defend it on the grounds that all the players in the leagues made a practice of wagering on their own teams.

Leonard, still in California, was quoted as gloatingly declaring he was even with Cobb and Speaker, but sorry he had been compelled to drag Wood into it.

Haskin's Letter

as long as there are enough staff offices to serve the combatant branch and maintain an efficient peace-time operation, the output of the Naval Academy shall be diverted to the line, where it is considered the training will give the greatest return in preparedness.

Although authority is given for the appointment to the academy of a hundred men from the enlisted personnel each year, there were only eighty-four in the entering class this year and ninety-four last year. It is hoped that in 1927 the full quota may be obtained.

A drive has also been made to give as much publicity as possible to the law of June 8, 1926, which authorizes the appointment of forty additional midshipmen at large. These are to be appointed by the president from among the sons of officers, soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps who were killed in action, or died prior to July 2, 1921, of wounds received or diseases contracted in line of duty during the World War.

A further provision of this law is that half of these appointments shall be made from among the sons of officers and the other half from those of warrant officers and enlisted personnel. If the full authorized quota of this group can be attained, it will aid in bringing the number of new officers up to the necessary requirements.

The passage of the bill providing for a five-year building program for naval aviation has increased the problem of specially trained aviation personnel. There has been this shortage for several years, since naval aviation is primarily a war-time development, and consequently nearly all of the Navel Reserve aviators who had entered the service in 1917 and 1918 were lost to the service after the war. One of the methods the department has taken to combat this shortage of aviation personnel has been to introduce a course of flight training for all midshipmen at the academy. This serves to give them basic training in aviation and makes it possible to sift out the best aviation material in each class for future training at Pensacola at decreased expense to the government.

The Navy Department feels that it was difficult enough to keep apace with officers requirements without having added the problem of meeting the situation with a reduced number of congressional appointments.

Regardless of military dress restrictions the Army and Navy will have to be content with a tie until next fall.—Martins Ferry Times.

ENTERTAINING ANGEL

CHAPTER THIRTY TWO.

"Oh!" was Jim's only reply to this naive statement. What more could he say?

"I've got to see it through, Jim. It's my personal fight. It hasn't anything to do with the company."

"But don't you think it's a little something that he went off on a drunk and missed his performance?"

"Yes. Yes, of course. That complicates it. But . . ."

He didn't finish. Jim shrugged. He was beginning to wonder if he knew what it was all about. "Life among the nuts," he thought, with a grim flash of humor.

"I don't want you to leave, Jim."

"But I'm through, I tell you. I can't handle Murry. Nobody can."

"I wonder."

Jim, at this, glanced around at Julian. "How're you going to do it? Heaven knows I've tried. But he won't hold to anything. Put your thumb down on him and he isn't there."

"I've been trying to think something out, Jim. Of course, I don't know anything about business, but I realize that I oughtn't just to go on handing him money . . . . ."

"I can't see it."

"No. But I was wondering if a lawyer couldn't help us."

"Incorporate, you mean."

"I hadn't thought as definitely as that. I'm simply no good about those things. They scare me. But why couldn't we?"

"H'm!" Jim considered the situation. "You could do that. Yes, you could do that. But you'd have to make him agree to accept less than half the stock. Not over forty-nine per cent. But . . . . see here, Julian, will you let me say it right out . . . what I think?"

"Yes," replied Julian, and swallowed.

"Well, I'm just about as much disturbed about you as about him. I'm afraid he'll talk you around. And that'll leave us exactly where we are now, only you'll be more out of pocket."

"I've been sort of worried about that, too. I hate to be mean."

"Well, there we are!"

"But wait a minute. . . . I'm trying to think this out . . . . Why can't I just send him to you?"

"Where'll that get us? What can I do?"

"Well, suppose I say I won't put up any more money unless he agrees to go into a corporation and accept forty-nine per cent as his share. Then you can have fifty-one per cent and manage the company.

"Fifty-one per cent?"

"Yes, you see . . ."

"But, good God! Where do you come in?"

"Well, it really doesn't make much difference to me if we can only . . ."

"You can't give me fifty-one per cent," said Jim, with a snap in his voice.

His pride was touched. Julian hadn't thought of that possibility.

"But if you're to manage the company. . . ."

"Wait a minute! I want to think!"

They walked slowly along. Julian inhaled the drug-like scent of the flowers and stared out into the luminous dry air. He pressed a hand lightly to his lip. He felt confused, wretched. Something had to be done. He didn't know what, but it had to be something.

"I tell you what I'll do," said Jim crisply. "If you want to give me the responsibility of managing the troupe . . . ."

"I do, there's nobody else."

" . . . I'll accept twenty per cent. You take forty and give Murry forty. Then let me have your proxy and I can handle him. I'll work at my present salary. We certainly can't go on loading up our overhead. Twenty per cent would give me an incentive to manage the thing carefully, and if I do that, it's possible to make a little money for all three of us."

"But twenty per cent . . ."

"I couldn't accept more," said Jim. They had swung around toward the hotel.

"There he is," Jim remarked, guardedly.

There, indeed, he was, descending the steps, a splendid figure in the familiar flannels and the belted-in coat, swinging his cane. He wore his hat slightly on one side, and moved jauntily.

"Impersonating the owner of the hotel," muttered Jim.

The loosely classical features spread in a benevolent smile.

"My dear young friends,' the sonorous voice floated before him down the path, "it is indeed a pleasure to see you enjoying this exquisite spot. How beautiful it is! And the flowers! I regret more deeply than I can tell you that the arduous demands of an actor's career have made it impossible for me to familiarize myself with . . ."

"I'll leave you," said Jim, in that crisp way and was gone.

Murry Watt lifted his face toward the sky and spread his arms dramatically.

"God's country!" The words rang out roundly over the expense of blossoms. "God's country, indeed! How it fills the soul with promise! As I was about to say, dear Julian, it is to me a deep regret that the circumstances of my life have deprived me of the great privilege of studying the beauties of nature that lie so richly and invitingly about us. The flowers, for example. What a deep mental resource it would give one to know each blossom bontanically, its history, its Latin name. Rose, for instance, is from rosa. That I do know. But nature surrounds us with innumerable beauties that we pass with no more than a careless glance."

They were ascending the steps. "Do be seated, dear friend. It is so delightful to have a moment of relaxation. Ours is, indeed, a busy life."

But Julian stood. It was coming. And he was afraid. He had never learned to say no. How could he say it now; embarass and doubtless hurt this fatuous, amiable, vague man; bring him up short, all sails aback. And yet, surely, this was the moment to take his stand or fall in Jim's eyes. No, he couldn't sit. He felt the watery eyes on him.

"Only one difficulty disturbs me today, dear Julian. There must always, it appears, be a fly in the ointment. Jim, I observed, was talking with you. Perhaps he told you of his unfortunate announcement to me?

"I regret to tell you he gave me notice this morning. We can ill spare him. We have been more than fortunate to keep him thus long. He is a most valuable young man, both efficient and honest. I have been considering what course we might take with him. Money, I have discovered in my progress through this preoccupied world, is only too often a salve to wounded pride. I think, in spite of his hasty refusal, that a little more money might bring him to reason. And that brings me to another matter which occurs to me that you and I, as partners, ought, perhaps, to go over the present situation of the Wayside Theater with some deliberation. You will understand, dear friend, I am sure, my heart-felt wish to take you into my confidence in the fullest possible manner. That, indeed, I must do. It is my duty, no less .. .. . It is, indeed, a pleasure to inform you that we stand on the very threshhold of success. Thanks to your friendly regard for an art, to your open-handed generosity . . ."

"I'd rather not talk about that!" It wasn't the best of beginnings for Julian. He shifted his feet, and gazed uncomfortably at an automobile that was parked in the driveway.

CERAMIC BOOKS MEIGHAN FILM

Paramount Star to Appear Here in "The Canadian."

A story of the great open spaces with nary a cowboy, Indian or dirty-dog villain. A tale of Canada with hardly any snow and not a single Northwest Mounted Policeman. If it were only for the absence of these two features, Thomas Meighan's latest Paramount feature, "The Canadian," which arrives at the Ceramic theatre Thursday for a three-day run, would be a fine picture! But add a stirring plot, one that won success on the stage as W. Somerset Maughham's "The Land of Promise;" a strong cast, headed by Mona Palma, Wyndham Standing, Dale Fuller and Charles Winninger; and the capable direction of William Beaudine; and a better-than-average film is sure to be the result.

Meighan enacts the part of a wheat harvester who works for his friend, Wyndham Standing, in an effort to finance a return to his own fields. While living with Standing, he meets the latter's sister, Mona Palma, a young English woman, just arrived in the provinces after having lost all her money. The new mode of living comes hard and she soon embroils herself with Standing's wife, Dale Fuller. Knowing that Meighan is "looking for a wife who will work," she offers herself and he takes her to his little cabin, off in the center of a vast wilderness of wheat.

The Canadian's eternal struggle with the climate for a living, and the vast underlying drama in which a he-man tries to break down the resistance of his cultured wife, help build up toward the picture's dramatic climax.

In it, Meighan is said to do the best work of his career. Arthur Stringer adapted Maugham's play. J. Clarkson Miller wrote the scenario.

HARRY LAUDER HERE TONIGHT

Company of Clever Entertainers at Ceramic.

Sir Harry Lauder's practice of asking his audience to join in the choruses of his songs is not original with the Scottish comedian, although he is one of the few entertainers who has ever succeeded in making American audiences respond. Chorus singing by the audience is a common diversion in England and Scotland, as well as in most of the British possessions.

The first year that Lauder tried to get the co-operation of his American audiences he failed to break through the American fear of "hearing one's own voice in public," but this reserve has now been completely broken down, and Lauder audiences, after a little skillful persuasion, join in the choruses with a will.

This will be one of the interesting features of the engagement of Lauder and his company of clever entertainers at the Ceramic theatre tonight.

'Ben-Hur' Written By Noted Soldier, Statesman, Author

Great Book by Distinguished Indianian, General Lew Wallace, Antedates Typewriter Era.

"Ben-Hur' was the product of a distinguished Indianian, General Lew Wallace, equally noted as soldier, statesman and author. Begun in 1875 and finished in 1880, its more than 100,000 words were twice written by hand—the last great book antedating the typewriter era.

Tradition says that General Wallace conceived the idea of writing "Ben-Hur" after a talk with "Bob" Ingersoll. "Is there a God?" asked Lew. "I don't know; do you?" "Is there a future life?" again asked Wallace. "I don't know; do you?" again replied Ingersoll. "Was Christ divine?" persisted the general. "I don't know; do you?" shot back Bob. And then Col. Robert G. Ingersoll gave his friend a three-hour blast on this subject that made Wallace feel himself an ignoramus.

He went home and studied and finally decided to write the high theme and became neither skeptic nor indifferentist but a convinced believer.

After a year spent on the story of the Wise Men, there came to him the main story of Ben-Hur twixt the Birth and Death of Jesus. Under a wide-spreading beech tree at Crawfordsville, Ind., the main part of "Ben Hur" was penned. The last book was written in a big adobe room of the governor's palace in Santo Fe, New Mexico. Here from 1878 to 1881 General Wallace ruled the territorials for his employer, Uncle Sam.

President James A. Garfield was among those who personally thanked Wallace for the pleasure afforded by his book. It did not become a real best seller until two or three years after publication. Its extraordinary career thereafter included a general circulation like the Bible's, translation into ten languages, a special Italian version under the auspices of the Holy See, and largest single sale ever made by any book; an order of 1,000,000 copies from a Chicago mail-order house.

Lew Wallace was born at Brookville, Ind., in 1827 and died at Crawfordsville in 1905. In the Civil war he became a general officer and corp commander at Shiloah and Corinth. After the publication of "Ben-Hur" he was named U. S. Minister to Turkey, serving 1881-1885. His other well-known novels are "A Fair God" and "The Prince of India."

Lawrence Barrett, Tommaso Salvini, and the Kiralfys for years begged Mr. Wallace to let them dramatize "Ben-Hur," but the author, doubting the possibility of staging such a work reverently, held back for nearly 20 years until in 1899 Abraham L. Erlanger presented a plan that satisfied his scruples and permitted a reverent and beautiful stage "Ben-Hur." For the 22 seasons of the dramatic presentation and now in the $4,000,000 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization, the wishes of General Wallace have been carefully and honorably adhered to.

MORNING MAIL DELIVERY ON CHRISTMAS DAY

Postmaster McClure Again Appeals for Patron's Co-operation.

PEAK REACHED

Hints Given on Handling of Yuletide Packages.

No deliveries after noon on Christmas day—mail early for delivery before the holidays.

This is the advice given today by Postmaster Edwin McClure to patrons of East Liverpool postoffices.

An additional force of about a dozen workers will help postal employes in the Yuletide business this week. Another truck has been pressed into the parcel post service, while extra carriers and clerks are also on the job.

Christmas cards are going through the office by the thousands. Here are a few of the hints outlined by McClure relative to handling and mailing Christmas packages:

"All parcels must be securely wrapped or packed. Use strong paper and heavy twine.

Fragile Objects.

"Articles easily broken or crushed must be crated or securely wrapped. Use liberal quantities of excelsior, or like material, in, around, and between the articles and the outside container.

"Glassware, fragile tops, crockery must be packed so as to prevent the escape of particles or pieces if broken in transit.

"Cigars: Ordinary boxes of cigars wrapped in paper will not be accepted. Pack in a manner to prevent damage by shock or jar. Wrap in corrugated pasteboard or similar material.

"All articles easily broken or damaged must be plainly marked Fragile.

"Addresses should be complete, with house number and name of street, postoffice box or rural-route number, and typed or plainly written in ink. A return card should be placed in the upper left corner of every piece of mail. If a tag is used, the address and return card should also be written on the wrapper for use if the tag is lost and a copy of the address should be inclosed inside the parcel.

"Postage must be fully prepaid on all mail. Affix the required amount of postage in the upper right corner.

"Christmas gifts and cards addressed to points within one day's travel should be mailed not later than December 20. Parcels and cards for local delivery should be mailed not later than December 22.

"Parcel and Envelopes may be indorsed: "Please do not open until Christmas."

Special Delivery Service

"The early mailing of Christmas cards is just as important as parcels. Millions of these cards, separate and in envelopes, are mailed each Christmas. Consequently, great congestion and delay occurs in large post offices when they are mailed within a day or two of Christmas. Therefore, if you want your Christmas greetings to reach your relatives and friends on or before Christmas day, follow the instructions in the preceding paragraph relative to mailing early and be certain of delivery before Christmas.

"Special-delivery service is obtained by affixing a special-delivery stamp of the proper denomination, or its equivalent in ordinary stamps, in addition to the regular postage. When ordinary stamps are used, the words "SPECIAL DELIVERY" must be printed directly below, BUT NOT ON THE STAMP. Special delivery is for speed and not for safety. Valuable mail should be registered or insured. If mailed in time the use of a special-delivery stamp will insure delivery on Christmas day.

"All valuable domestic parcel-post mail should be insured. Insurance fees: Value not exceeding $5, 5 cents, not exceeding $25, 8 cents; not exceeding $50, 10 cents; not exceeding $100, 25 cents.

"Coin, currency, jewelry, and articles of similar value should be sent as SEALED FIRST-CLASS REGISTERED MAIL.

"Parcel-post, also third-class matter may be sent C. O. D. from one money-order postoffice to another."

Home-made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly

Finest cough medicine you ever used. Family supply easily made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup, or clarified honey. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, famous for healing the membranes.

Cleveland Owes State $89,510 in Crabbe Act Fines

COLUMBUS, Dec. 22.—Cleveland owes the state of Ohio $89,510.42 the state's share of fines collected in liquor law cases in that city during 1921 under the Crabbe Act, according to a decision announced yesterday by the state supreme court.

The supreme court reversed the decision of the Cuyahoga county common pleas court in its decision which contends that as the Crabbe Act superseded Cleveland's municipal court law this later act nullified those parts of the municipal court act which were in conflict with the Crabbe act.

As a result of this decision the attorney general's office estimates the city of Cleveland must pay into the state treasury approximately $500,000 representing the state's share of liquor fines collected under the Crabbe Act since 1921.

The city of Youngstown, it is estimated, will be required to pay between $50,000 and $60,000 into the state treasury as a result of the same decision.

The dining-room was decorated with Christmas favors and a tree occupied a prominent place. The entertainment was in charge of the ladies, with Mrs. Wick Frye as chairman. A quartet composed of Mrs. Dick Fitzpatrick, Miss Margaret Stewart, Mrs. D. H. Hepburn and Mrs. P. H. Felgar, with Mrs. E. T. Coyle as accompanist, sang a number of Christmas carols. There was also a guessing contest, but the feature of the evening in the "stunt" line were the imitations of the Rotarians by the women. Chirstmas donations will be given to all needy families, and anyone wishing to give something to this cause, either in money or merchandise of some kind, should report to Secretary H. R. Riddle or some other Rotarian before Friday evening.

Mrs. James Nolan entertained a group of friends at her home on North Main street Friday evening. Monte Carlo whist was the diversion, two tables being in play.
